THE MINE RIFLE.—It is well known, what is termed the "Mine Rifle" is nothing more or less than the adoption of the expanding bullet, for small arms. WILLIAM GREENE, the celebrated gunmaker of Birmingham, claims the honor of the invention, and the London Times of the 20th of December publishes a communication, showing that LORD PASSELY has sanctioned the submission to Parliament of an award of £1,000, in the estimates of the ensuing year, "as a public recognition of Mr. Greene's priority in bringing this invention before the War Department.

A SWORD OF THE "SIX HUNDRED."—We saw and handled yesterday a relic of Balaclava, in the shape of a sword, wielded by Lord Levison Gower, in the famous charge of the "Six Hundred." It is a Scottish claymore of great antiquity—having been in the possession of the Granville family for several centuries—made of the finest tempered steel, with basket hilt of the same material, and it measures about three feet from point to guard. The owner presented it to Captain du Riviere of the Zouaves, the present possessor, who succored him while lying on the field of Balaclava, desperately wounded. The scabbard is dented in several places by the hoofs of horses, and the hilt is slightly injured by the thrust of a Cossack's lance. The charge of the "Light Brigade" is not so recent but that this relic of the event possesses considerable historic interest.—N. Y. Evening Post.

We lately stated that the officers and men of the United States Army were dissatisfied with their low rate of pay. We now understand that Congress contemplates giving them an increase.
