Fainting.—It is wrong to hold up a fainting person, and especially to keep the head erect. Fainting is caused by a want of blood in the brain, the heart failing to act with sufficient force to send the blood against the laws of gravitation. If then, you place a person sitting, whose heart has nearly ceased to beat, his brain will fail to receive blood; if you lay him down with the head lower than the heart, blood will run into the brain by the mere force of gravity, in sufficient quantity generally, to restore consciousness.
