

VARSAITY BOOK.—PROSE AND POETRY.

'TIS LIFE FOR ME.

Three score and ten, a wise man
Said, were our years to be,
Three-score and six I give him back
Four are enough for me.
Four in these corridors,
Four in these walls of ours,
These give me, Heavenly Powers,
'Tis life for me!

*These songs fly forth to you, old friends,
Who once have walked the echoing corridors,
Or pressed swift feet upon the grassy lawns,
Or drunk the spirit-haunted pages here;*

*To wake again the memories of days,
The vision of the happier days gone by,
To wake again the murmur of the pines,
To show the grey towers rising in the gloom.*

*And so when days are wan and hearts are cold,
These songs may bring again the joy of youth,
A glow that rises in the flaming west,
That lingers last when the sweet sun has gone.*
