

Section Skills and Their Importance

In the following section you will learn to:

- Navigate the Web

The World Wide Web consists of interconnected groups of information, including text, graphics, audio, and video. Netscape Navigator makes it easy to find your way through the Web to take advantage of this wealth of information.

- Use bookmarks

As you move from page to page, you'll often want to return to a previously visited page. Bookmarks let you mark these pages as you would those in a book, so you can easily return to them at any time.

- Search the Web

The Web contains so much information that looking for a specific topic can be a daunting task. Fortunately, there are several search programs on the Web to help you find exactly the information you need.

- Save and print

After you've found the information you need on the Web, you might want to save it to disk or print it for future reference.

- Access an FTP server

FTP servers contain a wealth of software you can download to your own computer. Accessing an FTP server and navigating through it are your first steps to taking advantage of this Internet service. Once you have found the desired file, a single click downloads it.
