

SECTION	PAGE
281. Double Function of Commercial Banks	237
282. Peculiar Privilege of Bankers	239
283. Banks Do Not Create Capital	242
284. Source of Capital and Credit of Bank	243
285. Operations of a Bank	244
286. Responsibility of the Banker for Proper Distribution of Capital	245

CHAPTER XVI.

DEPOSIT CURRENCY.

287. Analysis of Credit	248
288. How Credit Promotes Industry	249
289. Banks Create Credits	249
290. Bank Credit Preferable to Cash	251
291. Shifting of Bank Credit Without Liquidation	251
292. Similarity of Checks and Bank Notes	253
293. Limits of Earning Power of the Bank	253
294. Difference Between a Cash and Credit Loan	254
295. Cash a Precious Commodity at Times	254
296. Problem of the Reserve of Greatest Importance	256
297. Lack of Coöperation Causes Banks to Lose Reserves	257
298. Methods of Increasing Reserves	257
299. Secondary Reserve	258
300. Unreliability of Bonds as Reserves	259
301. Government Deposits	259

CHAPTER XVII.

BANK STATEMENT—RESOURCES.

302. Combined Statement	260
303. Proof of the Deposit Currency Theory	261
304. Double-Entry System	262
305. Alterations in Value of Resources	263
306. Concealed Assets	264
307. Loans and Discounts	264
308. Overdrafts	265
309. United States Bonds to Secure Circulation	266
310. United States Bonds to Secure United States Deposits	266