HOUSE HEATED

the principle of some effect," he said. "but will such legislation do any good? It might such. As a matter of principle I am opposed to the use of tobacco in every form. Nevertheless, I could not support the resolution, because it is too late in the session."

Dr. Barr said Mr. Fisher evidently had forgotten that procrastination the thief of time.

"Now is the acceptable time," said Mr. Maclean.

"Yes, the evil is increasing. Let us throttle it now," urged Dr. Barr.

Dr. R. N. Smith (Conservative, Quebec), was astonished at Mr. Fisher's pleading for delay. He was equally astonished at the premier's statement that cigarets were not injurious to adults. Until cigarets came in no one heard of children smoking. Cigarets were working a great evil. Everybody in the house apparently favored the resolution. Then why not pass it?

Mr. Devlin (Liberal, Quebec), opposed the resolution. He did not think cigarets any more injurious than cigars or a pipe. Some could smoke one, and not another.

"How would it look at a dinner party if every one was compelled by law to smoke a pipe?" he wanted to know.

Mr. Monk offered an amendment calling upon the government to introduce legislation against the use of cigarets by or the sale of cigarets to minors under the age of 15."

Drastic Law Necessary.

Dr. Barr said such a law already existed in Ontario. It did some good, but more drastic legislation was needed.

Mr. Johnston (Liberal, Cape Breton), had Mr. Monk's amendment declared out of order, and then offered the same amendment, except that the government is requested to introduce legislation at the next session.

Mr. Barker or Hamilton then reintroduced the Monk amendment as an amendment to the Johnston amendment.

Mr. Monk then moved that "the question be now put."

By this time the house was so tangled up that Mr. Hughes (Liberal, P.E.I.), appealed to the chair to know "what he should talk about."

Talk about three minutes," some one suggested.

It being three minutes to six, Mr. Hughes took the hint and talked the entire subject matter out, thus saving the embarrassment of a vote.
