While Germany Desires an Understanding on Far Eastern Matters - Never Any Serious Difficulty Between King and Kaiser, The Britain Would Have Stood by France in Moroccan Conflict.

London, July 24.—From a high official of the foreign office to-day the Associated Press obtained an interesting statement regarding the relations of Great Britain, France and Germany. Beginning with a declaration that Great Britain would welcome a defensive alliance with France because it would insure a long continuance of European peace by acting as a check to German ambitions, the official characterized the charges made in the German press against Great Britain, of seeking to involve France in a war with Germany, as absolutely contrary to the

He said: "France certainly is not desirous of war with Germany, and if Great Britain, as alleged, urged France to fight, the French government and press would not now display that friendliness towards us which is apparent on all sides.

When Germany created the contro versy with France over Morocco, the British government informed the Frence government that it would support it in whatever policy it decided to pursue. Accordingly, Great Britain declined to participate in the international conference when France declined, and accepted when France reconsidered its decision; but any charge that we sought to bring about war or failed to use our good offices to prevent a conflict is absolutely false.

To Insure Peace.

"We would undoubtedly have stood by France in any conflict over the Mo-roccan question, but we do not want a conflict and desire an understanding with France solely to insure peace."
"Great Britain at war would suffer infinitely greater commercial losses than her adversary. For one thing, our entire shipping would go to American

Czar Wanted an Outside Opinion On Internal Situation in Russia

Berlin, July 24.—The meeting of the two emperors took place on the initiative of Emperor Nicholas. The prevailing idea is that the Russian Emperor desired an outside opinion from a ruler of his own rank on the internal situation in Russia. His invitation to Emperor William is regarded as being the result of friendship and confidence in him.

Altho the meeting is considered as being of high importance for Russia, it cannot signify any change in Germany's policies toward Japan of Russia. Emperor William had not seen the Russian Emperor since the autumn of 1903 at Wiesbaden.

The German Emperor went within easy distance of St. Petersburg because it would be impolitic for Emperor Nicholas to leave the country and visit German waters. and visit German waters.

Socialist Movement Alarms Kaiser He Wants to See Russia at Rest

St. Petersburg, July 24.-In diplomatic quarters not exactly friendly to Germany, there is a disposition to suspect the German Emperor of trying to bring about an alliance between Germany and Russia, not only to block the attempt which is believed to be making to isolate Germany thru her understanding with France, and the latter perhaps thru an understanding with Russia, but for the mutual protection of the RUSSIAN-GERMAN ALLIANCE. An afternoon paper quotes a significant editorial in the semi-official Berlin Post, hinting that France has grown cold towards Russia, that the Russo-French alliance is on the eve of dissolution, and that there is an increasing feeling in Russia in favor of "concluding an alliance Germany, even at the cost of great sacrifices."

But the idea of a Russo-German alliance is distinctly rejected at the foreign office, where, however, it is admitted that the officials have no specific information on the subject of the emperors' meeting, Foreign Minister Lamsdorff not being consulted and no representative of the foreign office being present. It is known, however, that a representative of Chancellor Von Buelow was on board the Hohenzollern. SOCIALISTS HAVE ALARMED.

Count Lamsdorff spoke and pointed out that the monarchs were personal friends and probably discussed many subjects, but he expressed the opinion that the exchange of views would have a more important bearing on the internal affairs of the two empires than on their external
