Said to be the Most Powerful Fighting Machine Afloat.

Washington, Aug. 30.—(Associated Press.)—The addition of the battle-ship Colorado, which was commissioned at Camden, New Jersey, today, to the United States battle fleet once more places the navy in undisputed possession of that trophy of marine construction, "the most powerful fighting machine afloat."

Naval engineers of the principal 75 marines.

stemethon, "the most powerful fighting machine afloat."

Naval engineers of the principal maritime powers practically without exception have conceded that the, 38,-600-ton, 21-knot monster, electrically equipped throughout and with the abliquity to toss eight tons of metal and explosives 34,500 yards, is without an equal on any of the seven seas.

Formal acceptance of the Colorado by the Navy Department today marks the end of the work of rounding out the first line of the United States battle fleet as allotted by the five power treaty. During the next eight years—until 1931—no keel will be laid in any American yard for a first class naval ship. In that year work will be begun on ships to replace three of the present fleet.

Cost $27,000,000.

The new vessel is described in marine circles as "a vast experimental laboratory." The most advanced designs in ship equipment of every sort have been installed, from her huge propelling motors to the dainty electric potato peelers in the galley. These will be tested ardiously and the results placed at the disposal of American and Stone the furner may.

building the national merchant marine and the future navy.

Authorized in the navy bill of 1916, the Colorado was constructed at the Camden yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company on a "cost plus fee" basis, which brought her total cost to $27,000,000. Her main offensive armament comprises eight 16-inch guns, the largest permitted under the Washington convention treaty, mounted in four turrets. To make these terrifically effective, there is a system of fire control declared to be superior to any yet emplaced either at sea or on land. The main control station is located at the top of one of the 140-foot cage masts, with several duplicate stations in more protected parts of the ship for use if the mast is shot away in action. Preliminary tests of the control regulted in the statement by naval gunners that the Colorado's entire broadside can be released in less than one minute after the enemy's position is reported by the accompanying air force.

The defensive equipment also in-the enemy's position is reported by the accompanying air force.

The defensive equipment also includes many innovations devised from study of the Battle of Jutland, which has come to mean the epoch-date for naval construction. Special installments will decrease to the minimum the danger of disablement from "plunging fire" from large guns, submarine torpedoes and air bombs. The 12-inch main armor belt has been supplemented by several lateral protective decks and a veritable honeycomb of watertight compartments.

Against Airplanes.

For dealing with airplanes, the Colorado has four 3-inch rapid fire guns with a vertical range of two miles. She will carry also several battle planes for "direct defense" in meeting hostile attack from the air. The air defense also includes in part the entire secondary battery of fourteen 5-inch guns, primarily designed to fight off destroyers.

Each of the propellors is driven by an 8,000 horsepower motor, to which power is supplied by two turbine generators, each of 15,000 horsepower. Control of the propelling machinery is centered in a small room in the most protected part of the ship wherein half a dozen men have charge of a simple set of electric switches and valves. Hase of maneuvering is declared to be a feature of the new ship, tests having proven she can be brought to a full stop from a forward speed of 21 knots in 3 minutes and run backward at not less than 15 knots. This was impossible in the steam turbine driven vessel.

The Colorado will possess all the conveniences of a well equipped city.

great success here this afternoon when 20 steers were marked with a two by four inch "C" in the Montreal stock yards to the complete satisfaction of members of the Canadian Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The steers did not appear to know that they had been marked with white-hot irons and the hides were in no way injured. The hair is neatly singed off leaving the required mark as plainly visible as though it had been burned into the animal. The only question now is as to whether the British authorities will be satisfied with the hair prities will be satisfied with the hair
