AN APPEAL FOR NURSES.

One of the consequences of the war is the deserted condition of the schools of nursing. It is said by hospital authorities that the time will soon come when hospital doors will have to be closed or arrangements made whereby patients can be cared for by their relatives. Hospital authorities are considering the wisdom of issuing an extensive appeal to the young women of Canada to take up the nursing profession by enrolling in the various schools of nursing, most of which are conducted in conjunction with general hospitals. So many of the trained nurses have gone into military service that the civilian hospitals find it most difficult to keep this important branch of their staffs fully manned.

PRACTICAL DAILY GUIDE FOR VACANT CITY AND BACK-YARD GARDENERS ENLISTED IN GREAT-ER PRODUCTION CAMPAIGN

A LETTUCE TIP.

Lettuce should be sown three times during July, and the young seedlings must be kept well watered. In fact, all lettuce should be kept very moist to prevent it from running to seed too quickly. Good, crisp lettuce is something that all war gardeners are keen to have, and frequently it is a disappointment to find it going to seed and becoming inedible in the process.

If you have not planted your lettuce in a shaded place, you might build a cheesecloth frame over the plants that are beginning to head up, and spray them night and morning during the war weather. This is the real secret of good, crisp lettuce.

Food Board Flashes For Feminine Folk

Help to harvest some of the wild fruits that grow so abundantly in different parts of Canada. There are certain districts in British Columbia, New Ontario and the Maritime Provinces where stretches of land are almost literally carpeted with blueberries. Then there are wild raspberries, strawberries, blackberries and Saskatoon berries, but the blueberries come first and foremost in the list.

If you happen to live near a spot where wild berries abound take the ladies with you and go out and pick those berries for all you are worth. The flavor of wild fruit when canned is delicious. In some parts of the country it would be quite practical for girls to organize wild berry-picking camps. In Nova Scotia the blueberry industry is so flourishing that some years the total exports run as high as $5,000,000. The Indians of the Georgian Bay and Muskoka regions do a large blueberry business, and the Mission Indians of Fort William have a raspberry picking camp on the mountain every summer. Families holidaying at the various summer resorts might well help in the same way.

I. O. D. E. SPLITS WITH THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Latter's Affiliation With Alien Association Leads to Action

Motion is Rejected—Council Declines to Accord to Request They Break With Enemy Organizations

The Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire has severed its affiliations with the National Council of Women. This was decided at a national executive meeting of the I. O. D. E. held on Wednesday and given out by Mrs. A. E. Gooderham, president of the organization.

At a session of the annual meeting of the Daughters of the Empire, held in Toronto in June, a resolution was unanimously passed, the substance of which was: "That unless the National Council of Women of Canada officially sever connections with Germany, Austria and Bulgaria, that the I. O. D. E. would sever its affiliation with the National Council."

A letter to this effect was soon after sent by the Daughters of the Empire to the National Council of Women, who referred it for discussion at the annual meeting to be held in Brantford later in June.

At the annual session of the National Council of the I. O. D. E. resolution was first brought before a private meeting of the national executive of the council, and later came before the delegates and members, to the exclusion of the press. After many hot arguments, a resolution was adopted by the council and given to the newspapers.

It said that the work of the women in internationally organized associations with the exception of the Red Cross had, since the beginning of the war, been in abeyance. It stated that the National Council of Women was in the same position in regard to international affiliations as other associations, including the Young Men's Christian Association, Women's Christian Temperance Union, International Council of Nurses, and the International Suffrage Alliance. Further, that like these associations, it would wait until the war was won before pronouncing its policy.

This statement was sent by the National Council to the I. O. D. E. shortly after the session, saying that the resolution had been discussed, "and that no action had been taken on the ground."

The resolution of the council was also endorsed.

The answer was brought before a national executive meeting of the I. O. D. E. on Wednesday with the result that the I. O. D. E. has severed its connections with the National Council of Women. This answer has been sent to the council, according to Miss Gertrude McGuffin, secretary of the association.

It states that "in view of the last clause of the resolution so unanimously carried at the annual meeting of the I. O. D. E. I am instructed to notify you that the affiliation of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire with the National Council of Women is now severed. Signed, Gertrude McGuffin, assistant national secretary."

When asked what the National Council of Women would have to say regarding this answer this morning, Mrs. E. H. D. Fairbairn, secretary of the council, said that she had nothing whatever to say on the matter.

Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Jenner, of West St. John, left this morning for Halifax to join their daughter, Miss Lena Jenner, who is a nursing sister in the Cogswell street military hospital, and who has been accepted for overseas duty. Miss Jenner is a graduate of the Winnipeg General Hospital and previous to accepting this government position she practised her profession in St. John, and is a member of the New Brunswick Association of Nurses.

OLD AGE AND WIDOWS' PENSIONS

(Toronto Star)

A man died recently leaving a wife and eight children, and as he had served at the front as a soldier in the war, had been invalided home, and discharged, a claim is put in for a war pension for his wife and children. The Pension Board, however, declines to grant the pension, claiming that there is nothing to show that the ex-soldier's death was due to his service in the war, and that he was able under the regulations to grant soldier's pension in this case.

Whether this widow and these eight children receive this pension or not is a matter, to them, of the utmost importance. Whether they receive it or not will make every possible kind of difference to them, now and throughout their lives.

But just now, while public attention is centred on this and similar cases, we would like to ask people to consider whether it would not be well to adopt a national plan whereby any widow with children under sixteen would receive a sufficient pension to ensure that the mother could maintain a home and keep her family together.

This is a question to which everybody should give serious thought. The mother and the home, if they are maintained, will give those children their best chance, and the family, if kept together, will be of most service and credit to the state and society at large. In making these assertions we believe there will be few who will feel inclined to dispute them, and we are sure that the plan, however good, for caring for children in public institutions, and letting the mother fare for herself, having been cut adrift from her natural life, and the maternal service which is the highest duty she can possibly perform in this world.

Some like to say that in a young country like this there is no need for old age pensions and no need for pensions to widows with children. It is quite proper to think highly of one's country, but it is not right to lose one's eyes to the facts of life as they are being spread open to view every day. There is need for such pensions even in this young country, for no matter how young the country may be many of its people are old and many widows and children are facing life with no fair chance at all. A young country like ours offers fine openings to the hearty and strong and fortunate, but men and women grow old here as elsewhere, and husbands die, suddenly sometimes, leaving wives and children exposed.

There is need for such pensions. From facts and figures compiled—not by Socialists, but by the American Bankers' Association—it appears that:

Out of 100 average healthy men twenty-five years old—when they reach the age of sixty-five—

One will be rich.

Four will be well-to-do.

Six will be earning their own living.

Fifty-four will be dependent upon relatives or charity.

The other thirty-five will not have lived to the age named. Of the hundred only will be rich and only another ten self-supporting or better. As for the others who survive to the age of sixty-five, they will be dependent on charity or will be supported by their relatives—most of whom will themselves be marching towards the day when they too, will be dependent on the support of others.

These are the hard facts of the busy life we see about us. The figures quoted are compiled, as we have said, not by Socialists, but by the American Bankers' Association. The figures apply to the United States, a country nearly as old as our own.

When a generation of men devotes itself to industry with the result that in old age of those who survive one per cent is rich, and 88 per cent are dependent for support on others, there is, of course, something seriously wrong with the distributive system by which the profits of a generation's toil are conserved and apportioned. That is another phase of the subject.

But there ought to be pensions for the old, and there ought to be pensions for the widows with children. Not only in their interest, but in the public interest there ought to be pensions.

It may be that such poverty and want is due to improvidence and lack of prudence in the days when one's earnings are large. But if the individual lacks prudence that is an additional reason why the community should exercise it.
