The Shortcomings of Jimmy

(Concluded)

'No, Jimmy replied. 'But I can give up my job—I'll probably be asked to do so tomorrow. I've been making the fight because I support my mother and she had to come to a warm climate. I'd going upstairs now.'

Kelly Evans removed his cigar from his mouth and looked carefully at it. 'I reckon that inside myself I knew the boy wouldn't do it or I wouldn't have tried to persuade him,' he said with much satisfaction. 'I reckon that I just wanted to prove to myself that there are boys like that left.'

The first men and the last to arrive at the 'Morning Call' the next day all soon found Jimmy Leroy in the city editor's 'cage.' The city editor was discoursing in very low but very emphatic tones; and Jimmy was listening and saying very little; but his face seemed to be growing whiter every minute. And presently the city editor arose and extended his hand to Jimmy. And Jimmy shook the hand quickly, and then took himself and a white face and a pair of dazed looking eyes out of the door, and disappeared. It was quiet apparent that the expected had happened. Jimmy had been fished.

A murmur that was evidently not one of approbation ran around the room for Jimmy, although 'different,' as he was called, was not. The city editor heard it, listened a moment to its growing louder, and then arose. 'Gentlemen, he said with a whimsical smile, you are about to have an unusual pleasure. I am about to make a speech. You will henceforth be relieved of the society of Mr. James Leroy. His shortcomings along some lines were so obvious that your agitation is a surprise to me. Besides, he seemed to be so much alone around here that he made me nervous. What's the matter, Evans? That's all true, isn't it?'

He stopped long enough to smile mischievously at Kelly Evans, who had arisen. A scowl appeared upon Evans' crimsoned face, but before he could reply his chief continued in a tone so different that absolute stillness settled upon the room:

'Two months ago a friend of mine who hasn't seen me for years started a paper in San Antonio. It is a paper with unlimited money behind it, and a future before it. But St. John's, as we know, is a town to its backbone and young and enthusiastic, is by no means a placid place. The paper will have to be a fair one, with all details open to inspection. And the man who manages it will have to be open to inspection, too; he will stand by his clean principles, and he will stand by his guns in spite of everything. He will be in the public eye. He will have to be good to look at, too; for he must be a credit to his paper, must stand for it, in fact. But the salary and the opportunity will more than compensate him for everything. It is a chance in a lifetime.

'My friend offered me the job, and I wanted it; but I couldn't take it, boys—because he is my friend, and I am what I am. I wouldn't give it to any of you for the same reason that I couldn't give it to myself. So I decided to offer it to the only different one among us, knowing that my friend would abide by my choice. And I tried Jimmy out. I found out what I wanted to know—that he can get out a paper from beginning to end; that he fights fair and stands by his guns, and is at all times a gentleman; and that he is to be relied upon always, because he's never incapacitated as the rest of us are. When he thought that I had turned against him he didn't try to disarm me with dinners, drinks and cigars. (Evans, the Gulf breeze was blowing in my direction last night.) He fought me with his best weapon—his ability and the courage of his convictions. And he stood by his guns up to the last night—no drinks, no profanity from him. And the result was one of the best papers we've ever gotten out, and a request from the printers that the make-up job be permanently donated to Jimmy; I found this request on my desk this morning, so it must have been written as soon as the paper was out. The way that San Antonio paper is going to be run. I was never before quite sure that it could be done.

'So I'm sending Leroy to San Antonio after he's had a week's rest. I know you'll forgive me my choice, because the rest of us are all so congenial that we really couldn't spare each other. But Jimmy's shortcomings, from our point of view, were what first attracted my attention; and afterwards I decided that, on the strength of those shortcomings, he could be spared from our midst. He was lonesome anyhow. He will be back of course to tell us all goodby; I think he was somewhat tired and wrought up this morning.

'I'm off to the Arizona desert to get out of my system the results of the insults I've been offering it for twenty five years. And if I ever come back, I'm going to acquire shortcomings just like Jimmy Leroy's.—E. Spworth Herald.

Thaw Escapes

(Matthewan, Aug. 18.)

Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, escaped from the hospital for criminal insane at 7:45 this morning. The dash for liberty was through an open gate, and then a dash for the open doorway of a powerful auto which stood quivering outside. In a flight like a rocket for the Connecticut State line, 30 miles away, he accomplished his escape. To-night he is still at large, and the hospital authorities feel certain he is outside the State. Once beyond the boundaries he is free. Only months, perhaps of litigation can bring him back to Matthewan, and then only in the event he is adjudged insane in the State to which he has fled.

Five confederates manned the car in which Thaw escaped and the big black Limousine which trailed it past the asylum gate. The hospital authorities believe Thaw fled to the shore Long Island Sound, boarded a yacht waiting with steam up to rush him to Europe. A reward of $500 for Thaw's apprehension has been offered by Dr. Keith, Superintendent of the Asylum. Howard H. Barnum, attendant at the gate, past whom Thaw flashed in his break for freedom, is under arrest. Other arrests are expected to follow the rigid investigation, begun by Dr. Keith. Shades were drawn in the dormitories. The inmates were getting their second sleep when Thaw left his room in the morning. He was fully dressed. A milkman's cart was rumbling along the outside, as he walked through the store room into the outer court or yard of the asylum grounds. Barnum, the gate attendant at the rear gate, was packing back and forth when Thaw closed the store room door behind him. He apparently did not grasp the significance of Thaw's early rising. A 08 horse power auto followed by a limousine also black, loaded lazily along the road as the milkman drew near the gate. Thaw standing a few feet away apparently unconcerned waiting till Barnum unlocked the gate and swung wide to let the milkman enter; at the same time two cars drew upon the further side of the road opposite the gate. The touring car stood still, its engine throbbing. As Barnum stepped aside for the milkman to pass into the grounds, he heard the gravel crunch beneath Thaw's feet. Looking up he saw the madman flash past him with the speed of the wind straight for the waiting car. With a stout Barnum started in pursuit, but a flying leap landed Thaw safe within the car. They were throwing up a cloud of dust just before he had gone twenty feet. Down the roadway dashed in a white cloud of dust, spread over their trail.

WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—'A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy.'—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. Coaker's Invitation

A New Version of the Spider and the Fly.

Will you walk into my party? Says Sir Coaker to Sir B. I've the prettiest little party. That ever you did see.

I've a kind and gentle nature, Though fond of my own way, And I'll let you lead the party If you do just as I say.

I've picked out all the seats I want, And packed them on the shelf, So I'll make no objection If you get a seat yourself.

Of course, I'm taking Fogo, And, though Earle may think it rough, He's had it now for several years And that should be enough.

And if we win to office When November's votes are polled, I'll let you be the Premier If you do just as you're told.

I am modest, though 'mysterious' And I don't care much for pelf; So I'd give you what portfolios I do not want myself.

So walk into my party, Dear Sir B. and do not fear And I'll guide you sure and swiftly In a way you need not fear.

All Lost Money

Victoria Sports bet on Rev. J. E. Starr making Retort.

Once upon a time a fearless judge of the Supreme Court sitting in Victoria was brave enough to manhandle the Rev. J. E. Starr, who was appearing as a witness in a case. The Rev. J. E. was fearless himself, if there was anything he was noted for in the fair coast city it was for the dauntless way in which he denounced things of which he disapproved. Busy young reporters let the citizens in on the court incident, and speculation was keen as to the nature of the revenge the fire brand young Methodist preacher would take. Victoria is the Monte Carlo of Canada; from which it may be inferred that gambling is a favorite pastime in that place. Bets were made freely as to whether or not the person would flay the judge on Sunday night. Other bets, and these were numerous, were as to the nature of the scourging. Mr. Starr's church was packed on Sunday night. They turned most of the people away. The reverend gentleman preached a noble sermon that night, but his lordship did not figure in a line, not even by inference. By aid by the closing hymn was sung and the people prepared to file out after the benediction, disappointed that nothing had happened. But the minister was not through. The benediction was not quite finished. —And may the Lord have mercy on those who lost their money to-night. Amen, it concluded.—Exchange.
