Ritchie, grocer of this city, man and wife. The bridesmaid was Miss Genevive Duke who was attired in a very prettyl light silk dress and the grooms man was Joseph Doody. The bride wore a neat brown travelling dress and carried an angrificent bouquet of white roses. After the knot was tied Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie drove to the bride's home, where breakfast was partaken of, after which the happy couple took the Flying Yankee for a trip to the principal American cities. The presents were most beautiful and numerous and the large array showed the great esteem in which the now happy bride was held. A handsome iclock was the gift of Mrs. Ritchie sr. He Went, He Saw, He Conquered. A Presbyterian minister in this province, not stationed in Halifax, but who has preached in this city not so very long ago, has excited a little interest among his acquaintances by the coup d'etat, as it were, by which he decided to unite his fortunes with that of a fair one who would help him in the work to which he has devoted his powers as well as prove the light of his home. It was in this wise: Revival meetings were being held in an out-lying [district from the town where he preaches and the assistance of the minister in question was secured at the meetings. There he became acquainted with a beautiful young lady who, though already engaged, within 48 hours had broken off with the former lover and become the affianced of the clerical new comer. How would it look to see a representative of the paw arrayed in dread combat with an occupant of the pulpit as a result of this affair? an occurence not at all unlikely, it is said if the aggrieved young man gets a chance.—Halifax Echo. Another June Wedding. A large crowd was gethered at St. John Baptist church, this morning when Monseignor Connolly performed the ceremony which made Miss Annie Flood and Mr. Robert J. He Went, He Saw, He Conquered. A Presbyterian minister in this province, not stationed in Halifax, but who has preached in this city not so very long ago, has excited a little interest among his acquaintances by the coup d'etat, as it were, by which he decided to unite his fortunes with that of a fair one who would help him in the work to which he has devoted his powers as well as prove the light of his home. It was in this wise: Revival meetings were being held in an out-lying [district from the town where he preaches and the assistance of the minister in question was secured at the meetings. There he became acquainted with a beautiful young lady who, though already engaged, within 48 hours had broken off with her former lover and become the affanced of the clerical new comer. How would it look to see a representative of the pew arrayed in dread combat with an occupant of the pulpit as a result of this fair? an occurence not at all unlikely, it is said if the aggrieved young man gets a chance.—Halifax Echo. Anether Jame Wedding. A large crowd was gethered at St. John Baptist church, this morning when Monseignor Connolly performed the ceremony which made Miss Annie Flood and Mr. Robert J. Ritchie, grocer of this city, man and wife. The bridesmald was Miss Genevive Duke who was attired in a very pretty light silk dress and the grooms man was Joseph Doody. The bride wore a neat brown travelling dress and carried a magnificent bouquet of white roses. After the knot was tied Mr. and Mrs, Ritchie drove to the bride's home, where breakfast was partaken of, after which the heapy couple took the Flying Yankee for a trip to the principal American cities. The provide was held. A handsome clock was the gift of Mrs. Ritchie sr. Mr. John Flood, brother of the bride, presented the provide was held. A handsome clock was the gift of Mrs. Ritchie sr. The new wing measures $3 feet in length by 27 in width. The basement is well arranged and it is laid out for store rooms of different kinds and coal house etc. It also contains a large room intended to be used as a dead house. On the first floor a corridor 5 feet wide leads into the wing from the main building. To the right hand on entering and in the rear of the new building is a splendidly arranged operating room which is to be equipped in the best possible manner. The room is circular in form and measures 20 feet across. It is lighted by a large bay window which extends half way around the room, and by a skylight by means of which the light can be made to fall directly upon the operating table. On one side of this room a gallery extends half way round from which the hospital staff or others who may wish or be required to witness an orefation can see all that is being done at the operating room are lavatories and closets, and across the corridor are three neat rooms for pay patients, with lavatories and closets for each. In the western end of the building on this floor is a large surgery ward 25 x 53 feet well lighted and ventilated. There are ten beds in it and it will be the male department, a surgery ward 23 by 43 feel and is laid of much the same as the first floor.
