

LESTER'S BRAIN.

If a man desires solitude, let him go to the coast line of Suffolk, keeping well to the south of the great east coast watering places...

Behind these are marshes trailing off to heather clad moors. On each rising promontory there is a fishing village, and some of them have escaped the excursion train at the feet of some of them the sea sings on unintermitted by the intellectual at song of the negro minstrel.

Craven Lester did shut himself up in his room. He laid out the sermon paper and affixed a new pen to his penholder, but before beginning to work he sat back in his chair and thoughtfully nibbled the end of the penholder.

In three weeks he came back to Myra's Bar. "Well," some one cried, "how is the new book getting on?" He smiled in his slow, grave way—slower, perhaps, and graver.

This was 10 years ago. Since then Myra's Bar has been burned down and a new Myra's built up. Myra—well, Myra has journeyed on as it is written elsewhere. In the new Myra's Bar, in the inner room, you may see Craven Lester any evening at the hour when the failures congregate.

Wilson Leonard, the doctor, says that it is a slow, creeping paralysis of the brain. But the poet, whose head is almost white now, has a theory of his own—National Observer.

My traveling companion happened to be a Boston drummer who was very much struck on himself. Just ahead of us sat a very pretty young lady. The car was crowded, and the young lady had without doubt been unable to procure a seat in the parlor car, so she occupied one with her maid, a mila.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been so successful as the Nerve Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nervous system is supplied with this nerve food. It is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nerve Tonic has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous derangement.
