VERSES OF YESTERDAY AND TODAY

The Land of the Last Good Bye.

A border land, a sad voiced sea;
Breaking along the shore,
Dead leaves strewn a wintry sea,
Night winds of never more.

There where the rolling billows swell,
Under a darkened sky,
And ever telling, a swelling bell,
In the land of the last good bye.

The foot prints down to the lonely deep,
Are more than the days and years;
More than the stars are those who weep,
And the sea is a sea of tears.

Every wave is a breaking heart,
With a mournful parting cry,
Ever the beautiful dead depart
In the land of the last good bye.

What millions of days since life began,
And death on the earth walked free;
Man has followed his brother man,
Of high and of low degree.

Followed him home with chant and psalm,
Knowing that all must die;
Hailing under the elm palm,
In the land of the last good bye.

Ever the beautiful and the best,
The loveliest of the young,
Abide their brief life in saintly rest,
While a parting hymn is sung.

And where all ages are gathered in,
As fast as the moments fly;
Crowned with the love we hope to win,
Is the land of the last good bye.

The trees are hung with the harps of time,
Swept by the dreamful air;
Catching the strains of love's home clime,
Where millions have knelt in prayer.

Where never without a weeping hand,
Or a broken hearted sigh;
On the shore where countless mourners stand,
Is the land of the last good bye.

Fair hands folded and fond eyes sealed,
Sealed in redeeming grace;
Witness the paradise life sealed,
Lighting a blessed face.

Saints to a holler will resigned,
In heavenly stillness lie;
There where the peace of the Lord they find,
Is the land of the last good bye.

O ye who seek that sombre place,
My sleep by (the waiting sea,
The snow blown over the mortal face,
Will be but a sign of me.

Call to me over the misty waves,
And listen their true reply:
We leave but dust in our quiet graves,
In the land of the last good bye.

Horison Hill, Oct. 1897.

CYRUS GOLDS,

Coming Back.

They say if our beloved dead,
Should seek the old familiar place;
Some stranger would be there instead,
And they would find no welcome face.

I cannot tell how this might be,
In other homes—but this I know
Could my lost darling come to me,
That she would never find it so.

Twelve times the flowers, have come and gone
Twelve times the winter winds have blown;
The while, her peaceful rest went on,<
