Young Wilfred calmly announces that he has been on the stage ten or eleven years, but, judging by his appearance, he must have made his debut, not to mention several later engagements, as an infant. It is an interesting fact that while a member of Miss Barrymore's company at Metro's Sixty-first Street studio, Mr. Lytell is also playing an important role with "Business Before Pleasure" at the Eltinge theatre. In fact, special arrangements were made for him by Ralph Ince, the director of Miss Barrymore's company in "Our Mrs. McChesney," to enable him to fill both engagements.
