Under-Currents

By The Duchess

Slowly with slender steps she rose and things aside the mouldy volume she had found in one of the rooms below, and which she has been making a fruitless effort to read, and looks out upon the sunless pleasure-ground beneath her window. Here and there indeed the happy gleams that Apollo is sending over all the land make their way through the openings in the edge, to lie in struggling patches on the sward but as a whole the outlook is gloomy.

Still to be out at all is better than a longer confinement in this dull room, and Vera may be in the summer-house Always in a half-hearted fashion she picks up a huge white sun-bonnet and going to the looking-glass puts it on; she puts a little in the doing of this; the sun-bonnet makes her look so adorable, but who is there to see her? With a last stifled sigh, and a little rush of tears in her pretty eyes, she goes down the staircase and makes her way to the garden.

There is the usual touch of silence, of sacredness—that general hush in the air that precludes evening. Far down below the ocean is glinting in the last rich rays of the dying day, and against the clear rose of the perfect sky stand out the unspeakable, colossal peaks of the strong calm hills. There is a soft plaintive rush of water somewhere, and on her right she can see the broad spread of the old chestnut woods so full of memories that now must indeed be dead, and to her left the fresh flower-filled green of the sloping meadows as they run down to the sea.

The sweetness, the intensity of it all reaches yet scarcely satisfies her, though it does seem hard that peace should not be where its very home seems set. But peace perfected is not to be for any one in this round of existence.

Griselda, welling onwards in her dinner-gown of white with her arms linked to the shoulder, and her charming face peeping out from the huge snowy bonnet, becomes suddenly aware of an unfamiliar figure that, kneeling on the grass before one of the beds seems to be weeding away for its life.

It is certainly the new gardener, poor creature, whoever he is, what could have induced him to come here? Not the—ages certainly; dire poverty, no doubt. After all what those dreadful newspapers say about the people's distress must have much truth in it. Perhaps Durdan had made a mistake in leaving; it might not be so easy these hard times to get another place, and half a loaf is however, mouldy, better than no bread. However Tom had promised to help him. A heavy sigh escapes her—oh that he could help her.

Uncle Gregory had evidently found no difficulty in replacing Durdan. Had he scented this new gardener on the old poor terms? If so, how badly off this poor fellow must have been. Indeed on a closer examination of him and of his clothes it becomes apparent to her that this miserable being must have been at fortune's lowest ebb when chance threw him in her uncle's way.

His coat is now only dirty but in the last stage of decay, so patched and darned indeed that the original stuff has long since assumed an air of mystery, lying ephra as it were, and waiting for a resurrection that may once again restore it to its primitive beauty. His trousers are but a melancholy reminder of other and happier days; his boots a marvellous illustration of how things "hang together"; whilst his esp pushed down well over his forehead, is a dismal obituary of a rabbit's dead a hundred years ago. Unhappy creature, poverty indeed must have been his guest before he and his clothes came to such a sorry pass. At this moment the "unhappy creature" lifts his head turns it deliberately towards her and—she finds herself face to face with Tom Peyton.

CHAPTER XXXII.

'Tis not the gently graceful gait. Well-made clothes well put on. The softly measures tone. Still talking of the rich and great That makes the gentlemen.

But 'tis the he-it, deeper true. A little sharp cry breaks from her, she stifles it, but turns very pale.

"You! You!" she says. "Your servt miss" she says he, touching his o p with quite a n ir—the late Durdan's air. He is naturally very much less disconcerted than she is having been prepared for this meeting which might take place at any moment. The moment had indeed seemed to him to have been a long time coming. He had been "taken on" yesterday, having asked for little or no wages, and it had appeared a very spite of fortune that nothing had sent Griselda into the garden last evening, and all this long morning and afternoon. There was no one he could trust to deliver a message, Grunch and Peters being the entire staff of servants so that perforce he was bound to rest quiet and resist his longing to send Griselda a word of warning.

Just now he is a little frightened by the pallor that has covered her face. "Don't look like that," he said in a low tone but sharply "Would you betray me? Remember it was my only chance of getting near you. Don't faint I mean, or do anything like that."

"Oh, how could you do such a thing?" says she in a trembling voice "And— and how strange you look, and what dreadful clothes you have on!"

The Proper Treatment
Old Man Peters—don't want you to treat my friend Hardnox as coldly as you do. He may not have much style, but He's a diamond in the rough.
Eld Peters—I know he's a diamond in the rough. That's the reason I'm cutting him.

You can always judge the wheels in a man's head by the spokes that come from his mouth.

AFTER SUFFERING A WHOLE YEAR

Mrs. King Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Iola, Kansas.—"I was a constant sufferer from female trouble for about a year. I had pains in back and stomach, in fact all over me, and was all run down. A friend of mine was cured of the same trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and it gave me health and strength and made a new woman of me. I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly, and you may publish my testimonial as it may be the means of helping some other suffering woman."—Mrs. IRENE KING, 36 West Campbell Street, Iola, Kansas.

The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory, many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Every ailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, ready to bring you health and may save your life.

"DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR

Stop dandruff and double beauty of your hair for few cents.

"DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR

Stop dandruff and double beauty of your hair for few cents

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Your hair appears soft, glossy and twice as thick and abundant. Try it!

Report Many Cases of Rheumatism Now

Says we must keep feet dry; avoid exposure and eat less meat. Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels, and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of this impurity.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.
