COLONIA REMEDY.

Only Common Soldier Who Rose From the Ranks to British Minister.

Colonel John Harrington, who has just presented to the Emperor of Abyssinia, to whose court he is accredited as Minister resident, a superb and perfectly trained Indian elephant, as a token of friendship from King Edward, is the only chief de mission in the diplomatic service of Great Britain who has risen to that office from the position of a common soldier in the ranks. In 1888 the Colonel, who received the Order of the Bath some years ago, and is now about to become Sir John as a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, was a private in the Middlesex regiment of Infantry. A year later he won a commission, and eighteen months afterwards was transferred to that picked body, the Indian Staff Corps. Before long he volunteered for service as Vice-Consul at Zoliah, a pestilential place, which served as one of the seaports to Abyssinia, the post on question being avoided as much as possible by the other members of the corps, by reason of its loneliness and unhealthiness. So good was the unwhipped Harrington made of his opportunities that he was able to render invaluable assistance to the special mission of Sir Rennell Rodd to Emperor Menelik in 1897, striking up a great friendship with Lord Edward Cecil, the soldier son of Lord Salisbury, who formed part of Sir Rennell's staff. The result was that when the British Government resolved upon establishing a permanent Legation in Abyssinia, where British interests are exceedingly important, both Sir Rennell and Lord Edward Cecil warmly recommended Harrington for the post. He has since received military promotion, and the influence which he has been able to acquire over the dusky potentate to whom he is accredited is so great that it has completely relegated into the background that of Russia and of France, which formerly predominated at Addis Abeba.

New He Settled Theft Charge.

In a Scotch country parish not long ago, says Tit-Bits, there lived a church officer who had filled that post and that of grave digger for the long space of fifty years. Suspended had long been entertained that he was in the habit of helping himself out of the collection plate whenever opportunity admitted. It was difficult, of course, to prove this. At last, however, the sum of £1 was abstracted from a missionary box which stood in the vestry, and everything combined to point out this man as the culprit. The elders told the minister that something must really be done. The reverend gentleman said he would make investigations.

The following Sabbath, after the morning service, the minister was taking off his gown and bands, and being alone in the vestry with the suspected man, he thought the opportunity was too good to be lost, so he said—

"Andrew, have you heard of the money that is a-missing from the box?"

"O'ay," said Andrew. "I was hearing something about it."

"Andrew," continued the other, very gravely, "this matter lies between you and me. We are the only two who have access to the box. Either you or I must be the thief."

"Deed, sir," rejoined the imperturbable Andrew, "it is just as you say; we're the only two that has had access to the box, and I think the best way'll be for you to pay the half and I pay the tither, and see nae mair about it."

Some Witty Teas.

A publisher once gave the following: "Woman, the fairest work in all creation. The edition is large and no man should be without a copy."

This is fairly seconded by a youth who, giving his distant sweetheart, said: "Delectable dear, so sweet that honey would blush in her presence and treacle stand appalled."

Further, in regard to the fair sex, we have: "Woman, she needs no eulogy; she speaks for herself." "Woman, the bitter half of man."

In regard to matrimony some bachelor once gave: "Marriage, the gate through which the happy lover leaves his enchanted ground and returns to earth."

At the marriage of a deaf and dumb couple some wit wished them "unspeakable bliss."

At a supper given to a writer of comedies a wag said: "The writer's very good health. May he live to be as old as his jokes."

From a law critic: "The bench and the bar. If it were not for the bar, there would be little use for the bench."

A celebrated statesman, while dining with a duchess on her 80th birthday, in proposing her health, said:

"May you live, my lady duchess, until you begin to grow ugly."

"I thank you, sir," she said, "and may you long continue your taste for antiquities."—Tit-Bits.

Obeysing Orders.

The Irishman that figures in the following anecdote would seem to have been excellently fitted to shine in some branches of the civil service where red tape is at a premium.

The late distinguished architect, Richard M. Hunt, used to relate that in his younger days, while he was supervising the erecting of a brick building, a recent arrival from Cork applied for a job, and was employed as a hod-carrier after being instructed that he must always carry up fourteen bricks in his hod.

One morning the supply of bricks ran out, and do his best the new man could find but thirteen to put in his hod. In answer to a loud yell from the street one of the masons on the sixth story staging shrieked down, "What do you want?"

"Trow me down a brick," said Pat, pointing to his hod, "to make me number good."

SAFETY OF THE AUTO.

Statistics Showing Accidents Resulting in Death on Other Conveyances.

In the forthcoming issue of the Automobile Club Journal appear some important statistics of fatalities caused by motor cars and other vehicles. They are drawn from the official figures of the annual reports of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, and cover an area of 688 square miles, from Colney Heath, in Hertfordshire, to Tadworth Heath, in Surrey, and from Lark Hall, in Essex, to Staines Moor, in Middlesex, the most congested and densely populated part of the United Kingdom. The figures cover the years from 1896, when the motor car was legally empowered to run on the public roads, to 1901, and on the strength of them the leading article in the Automobile Club Journal is headed "The Safest Vehicle on the Public Roads."

The Journal says: "It will be seen from these figures that a very common impression that motor cars are responsible for a large number of fatal accidents is totally unsupported. Since the act of 1896 legalized the use of light locomotives upon the highway, the average number of persons killed annually in the streets of the metropolis by light locomotives is less than one." The slow-going vehicles are responsible for more fatal accidents than the quick traveling ones. The following figures speak for themselves:

Killed annually by vehicles in London:

By vans	70
By carts, wagons, and drays	43
By cabs	19
By omnibuses	17
By private carriages	6
By light locomotives	1

"Making every allowance for the fact that the number of motor cars is still limited as compared with horse-drawn vehicles, it is still clear that autotrans are among the safest vehicles in use in London, and that the popular opinion as to the number of persons killed by them is totally unsupported by the facts."

The real fact is that control, and not speed, is the measure of safety. Motor cars and bicycles being the most under control are the safest vehicles on the streets, while the brakeless, slow-going, clumsy vans, drays, and wagons are the most dangerous.—London Telegraph.

A CLEVER PUZZLE.

It is Made of Paper and Will Be Found Quite Amusing.

Here is a clever paper puzzle that will amuse you while you are making it and will amuse you after it is made in watching your playmates trying to solve the secret of properly taking it apart. You can make the puzzle as large or as small as you wish.

First take a piece of paper, double it, and cut from it a pair of boots, as in Fig. 1, the fold in the paper coming at the top of the boots and consequently joining them together.

Then take another piece, fold it and cut in the form of Fig. 2, A being the folded end. Fold still another piece, and cut it like Fig. 3, B representing the folded side.

HOW TO MAKE THE PUZZLE.

Now open the smaller piece, as in Fig. 4, and push the point A through the opening in its center, Fig. 5. Then put one boot through the loop of the long arm, between A and the smaller piece, which has been pushed forward as far as it will go (Fig. 6). Now pull the smaller piece down over A and open the largest piece, and the boots are fastened on to the larger paper in such a way that, if you do not know how, they are hard to get off.

After they are in place, with your finger nail smooth out the creases made at A, Fig. 5, as their appearance might furnish a clue toward solving the mystery.

When you pass them to your friends to take off explain that they are not to bend the boots.

A Toy Microscope.

Some very pretty experiments may be made with the simple apparatus herein described. An ingenious boy can make all the necessary preparations and without expense.

Get a piece of wire about six inches in length and bend two inches of it down at right angles. Then bend the other end, also at right angles, but in a direction opposite to the first.

Place the horizontal branch of the wire on the rim of an ordinary glass tumbler and let it hang there so that the vertical part of the wire shall not touch the inside of the glass. Over the lower branch of the wire hang a piece of tin foil and then place on top of the glass an ordinary tin plate.

Now, what you have to do is to electrify the tin foil, and this you can do by rubbing a glass rod or a stick of sealing wax with a woollen cloth and holding it close to the tin plate, when the two ends of the tin foil will fly apart suddenly. This shows that you have electrified the foil by means of the electricity awakened in the glass rod or sealing wax by rubbing it.

Conundrums.

Why is a fashionable lady like a steam engine? Because she has a train behind her.

What relation is a door scraper to a door mat? Step farther.

Why is a horse the most curious feeder in the world? Because he eats best when there is not a bit in his mouth.

What flower is always under your nose? Tulip.

A washerwoman dropped something she couldn't pick up. What was it? Water.

Why is a cat like a match? Because the cat lights on its feet and the match lights on its head.

Why is an elephant an unwelcome caller? Because he always brings his trunk with him.

What is the strongest rope in the world? Europe.

What is the oldest table in the world? The multiplication table.

Why is the heart of a tree like the tail of a dog? Because it is farthest away from the bark.

Laid Up in His Head.

Daniel Webster once told a good story in a speech and was asked where he got it. "I had it laid up in my head for fourteen years and never got a chance to use it until today," said he.

Some little boy or girl wants to know what good it will do to learn the "rule of three" or to commit a verse in the Bible. The answer is this: "Some time you will need that very thing. Perhaps it may be twenty years before you can make it fit in just the right place, but it will be just in place some time. Then if you don't have it you will be like the hunter who had no ball in his rifle when the bear met him."—Washington Star.
