RADIE LAVELLES DEATH.

A Raddenes Hamilton Young Woman's and the state of the control of the con

TO MARRY SUCH AS SHE.

Before this the young man came into possession of a watch and chain and two gold rings belonging to the young woman, who after their first meeting had become deeply enamored of him. The following evening, which was Saturday, Sadie met Ida Simmons about 9 o'clock and the two proceeded to the boat house, but were unable to find the brothers. When they reached the Walker House on their return they met a third young man, a friend of the two who owned the boat house. He and the two girls went back to the boat house, where they remained for probably half an hour, but as the brothers did not put in an appear, ance they started a second time for home. Sadie Lavelle was a delicate-looking young woman though she had seen eighteen summers, and when the corner of York and Front streets was reached the young man who accompanied the two girls requested that she take a Yonge street car, as the disappointment at not seeing her so-called lover appeared rather too much for her. She consented and stepped on the car, but the street and then fell upon the pavement, but was not, apparently, hurt by the fall. The trie walked to the corner of Bay and Quean streets, where Ida and the young man said "good night" to Sadie. He, however, before they parted, offered to hail a cab to take her home to Teraulay street.

Ida Simmons, who was seen yesterday, states that he and the young man left Sadie Lavelle about 10.15 a week ago Saturday night, while the young man avers that the hour was 10.45. Almost from that hour there have been startling rumors circu.

Sadie Lavelle about 10.15 a week ago Saturday night, while the young man avers that the hour was 10.45. Almost from that hour there have been startling rumors circulating in the neighborhood of 118 Teraulay street. One woman in the immediate vicinity states that at about 11.30 on Saturday night week a cab wheeled up to the McGregor house containing Sadie Lavelle, who when taken from the vehicle was in a weak and serious condition, and complained of having been drugged by some person whose name she did not then give. The authors of this statement also allege that a physician was called in who, after examining the young woman, refused to prescribe for her

UNLESS THE POLICE WELE NOTHIED.

The name of this doctor could not be ascertained, and while Mrs. McGregor states that Dr. Wagner, who was called on Sunday evening, was the first to see the young woman, the neighbors protest that such is not the case. The girl grew gradually worse and on Monday became delirious. It is said by some that she never revived for a moment from this state while others profess to know that on Saturday last, the day before her death, during a brief spell of consciousness she made a statement to those who were attending her. The substance of this statement could not be learned, and Mrs. McGregor is reticent to speak of this statement could not be learned,

He left the city on Saturday ostensibly to visit friends across the lake, and was expected home by his brother last evening. But a short time before his departure a friend was heard to remark to him that and he had better skip. Ida Simmons states that before he went he sent a letter to the McGregor family, but they refused to tell her what it contained. She understood, however, that he had promised to make everything right no matter what happened. That communications passed between the brothers and the McGregor House while Sadie Lavelle was sick and dying Ida Simmons believes to be a settled fact, as they knew the girl's condition from the time when she was taken ill. The remains of the unfortunate young woman were taken to Hamilton by boat yesterday morning, and will be interred this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, the funeral proceeding from the residence of Wm. Vedden, 12 Nelson street, uncle of the dead girl. Not one of the three young men visited the house on Teraulay street after Sadie Lavelle died, and the fact that Ida Simmons was not present yesterday morning when the body was being removed to the boat was commented upon. The latter young woman has left the Robinson House and made an enwas being removed to the boat was com-mented upon. The latter young woman has left the Robinson House and made an en-gagement with an opera company. The case is a very complicated one, and although the detectives have been scarching for clues during the past three days they have not succeeded in unearthing sufficient evidence to warrant making an arrest.

A TIMES representative called at the house of Mr. Wm. Vedder, No. 12 Nelson street, in the west end, Tuesday On being questioned concerning the statements in the Globe, Mrs. Wm. Mrs. Vedder) had sursed Miss Lavelle. She had brain fever and symptoms of typhoid.

Mrs. McGregor, a hearty, young-looking woman (mother of the deceased), was called into the room, and spoke to the reporter. She said she did not believe any of the stories that were circulated about her daughter. She said that Toronto detectives had called at the house before her daughter. She said that Toronto detectives had called at the house before her daughter died, and asked her (Mrs. Lavelle asked the doctor if such was the case, and he said it was not enciente. Mrs. Lavelle asked the doctor if such was the case, and he said it was not. The statement that the doctor wanted the police informed, is also denied by the girl's mother.

Mr. A. J. McGregor, Sadie's stepfather, was quite indignant at the Globe. He said: Of course the young girls were going out and in as other girls did, but that Sadie was always at home in good time. He produced the following certificate from his pocket, remarking, "In the face of this I cannot see what doubt there can be about the cause of death":

I hereby certify that Sadie Lavelle died at 118 Terauley street this command, and the seeds being probably typhold tever, with severe brain symptoms.

A man's best monument is his virtuous actions. Foolish is the hope of immortality and future praise by the cost of senseless stones, when the passenger shall only say, "Here lies a fair stone and an unsightly carcass." Steamers Collide Off Melbourne and One Goes to the Bottom.

A London cable says: A despatch from Melbourne states that a collision occurred at 1 o'clock this morning inside Port Phillips Head between the steamers Gambier and Easby. The Gambier was bound from Sydney for Melbourne, and was just clearing the heads, when she met the Easby bound out. It was impossible for the vessels to clear each other and the Easby struck the Gambier amidships, crushing in her side to such an extent that when she backed away the water ran into the hold of the Gambier in torrents. A scene of tertible confusion and excitement followed the shock of the collision. Most of the passengers were in their berths asleep when the accident happened. The Easby remained along side the Gambier and rescued many of the latter's passengers and crew. Notwith standing their efforts the Gambier filled so rapidly that it was beyond human power to save everybody. Sevep minutes after the collision she sank, carrying with her five saloon passengers, fifteen steerage passengers and six of the crew. The Easby sustained considerable damage.

A London cable says: The report that France and Russia have virtually agreed that in the event of a victory over Germany they would have Schleswig re-annexed to Denmark has caused considerable comment in Berlin, where the war feeling has beem mounting high for some days past This rumor, however, has called to public attention other rumors of a similar nature regarding the Triple Alliance. It was stated recently on high authority at Vienna that one of the unwritten agreements of the alliance was, in the event of success in a continental war, to disable Russia forever,
by taking from the empire Poland, Finland, and the Baltic provinces, and compelling the Czar to abandon St. Petersburg for Moscow; France at the same time to be compelled to give up Nice and Corsica to Italy. These arrangements are understood to be merely provisional, but the fact that they are talked of shows the deliberate way in which European nations are preparing for the gigantic struggle. The Russian rifle factories are running night and day on the new breechloading repeating rifle with which it is proposed to arm all the infantry, both of the active army and the reserve. But although the greatest diligence is shown in the manufacture, it is believed that at least two years will elapse before the whole military from going to war in the meantime, as not

A PATENT RIGHT CASE. . Toronto Man Jailed at Wingham Charge With Fraud.

A Wingham despatch says: A man giving his name as V. Taylor, of Toronto, was before Mayor Clegg charged by Mr. S. Jackson, of Brussels, with fraud. From the evidence it appeared that Taylor had been selling a patent harrow clip and the right to make and sell them to different parties and agreeing to furnish them five dozen of the clips within ten days after sale. He sold the right to Mr. Jackson for Grey and Morris and also sold the right of Morris to Mr. V. Vannorman, of Belgrave. The purchasers of the patent right becoming suspicious that things were not right, had inquiries made in Toronto where Taylor said his establishment was located, but no such manufacturing concern could be found, and the purchasers became convinced that they had been bitten, and had Taylor arrested at Teeswater. The notes procured by Taylor in payment of the right sold in this section were disposed of in Brussels and Wingham. Under a late act passed all notes given for a patent right must have printed or written across the face of them, before they are offered for sale, the words: "For patent right." Those disposed of by Taylor had not this on the face of them, hence he was committed to Goderich jail by Mayor Clegg. Failing to secure bail, he westaken down.

A MICHIGAN MYSTERY. Father and Daughter Found Dead in

Father and Daughter Found Dead in a London Grouped by James Burns and a woman whom he called his daughter. Herman Grotick was bound for here with a load of produce yesterday morning and on the stale and entrance and on the bed in one of the rooms he found the decomposing body of Burns. Across it lay the body of his supposed daughter, with a piece of twine tied tightly about her neck, showing that she had strangled to death. No marks of violence were found on Burns' body, and Grotick at once conjectured that he died of natural causes, and this the woman had, through sheer grief, committed suicide.

Starving Men Rise in Rebellion Against the Czar's Ukase.

A St. Petersburg despatch says: Details of the rioting at Vitekesk, capital of the Government of that name, occasioned by the people's protest against the exportation of rye, show that the disturbance was serious. The Governor reports that there was evidence that a general revolt of the peasantsy had been planned. The peasants attacked the railroad officials, demanding no more rye should leave Vitekesk, and severely beat the Jewish grain dealers, who are blamed for the whole trouble. The peasantry also plundered the residences of these grain dealers, and finally attacked the railroad station. The military was then summoned. The rioters resisted stubbornly, and their supporters outside the railroad station made a fierce attack upon the soldiery, severely injuring many of them. Finally the officer in command, after repeatedly threatening the crowd, gave the order to fire upon the rioters. The soldiersthen fired a volley, killing two peasants and wounding a number of others. The rioters soon afterward dispersed. Similar disturbances are reported from Dunaborg, Vint and other places, but no details have been made public.

Good Advice to Girls.

Scarcely a day passes without its newspaper story of same young woman who met a man so interesting that she thought she couldn't live without him, so she married him in haste and afterward learned that he was an ex-convict or a brute or already had a wife or two from whom he had separated without the formality of a legal divorces in such cases the blame is laid upon the man, who generally deserves more abuse than he gets. But, girls, look at the matter acricusty a few minutes and see if the trouble might not have been avoided if you had not been in too much of a hurry.

The Uncomfortable Situation in Which a Terrote Man is Placed.

The little grocery store on the corner of Andorson and William streets was the scene of an incident Thursday night, which has put the proprietor in a very uncomfortable position, and one which he would willingly resign to someone else. Early in the evening a woman carrying a baby bundled-up walked into the store, deposited the armful on the counter and left. Mr. Johnston made a frantic endeavor to get the mother to take her baby away, but it was unsuccessful. She said she thought he should be proud to be given a chance to support his own child, but the irate storekeeper denied, in vehement terms, the paternity of the infant. However, as the mother ended the argument very abruptly by walking off, Mr. Johnston had to take some action. He despatched a couple of boys to the police station for a posse of constables. The inspector listened to the story of the couriers, and decided that he could not do anything to relieve Mr. Johnston of his unwelcome charge. The grocer is therefore in possession, but is earnestly hoping that the mother will change her mind and return for the repudiated youngster. The story of the affair is this: Johnston is married to the sister of the woman who left the infant on his counter. Some time ago, when his wife was ill, he got the sister-in-law to come to his house and attend to her. The sister-in-law alleges that he accomplished her ruin at that time, and the mother some time ago instituted a suit for damages against Johnston on this account. Yesterday a meeting was held at the Police Court between the interested parties, it is said, not nees the interested parties, it is said, not in despair at not receiving needed assistance from Johnston she left the child with him to care for .—Empire.

MIXED MARRIAGE RELATIONS. Ridgetown Woman Charged With the Crime of Bigamy.

A Ridgetown Woman Charged With the Crime of Biganny.

A Ridgetown despatch says: Mrs. Catharine Robertson, nee Rose, was married at Ridgetown in 1885 to John Marshall. The union was not found congenial and the parties shortly after separated. Mr. Marshall has been living latterly in Blenheim. He is disposed to ignore his marriage with Mrs. Robertson on the grounds that Robertson is yet alive. Mrs. Robertson, though apparently not desirous of living with Marshall, had interfered in his matrimonial intentions towards a lady in Blenheim. Marshall had Mrs. Robertson before Mr. Watson here charged with bigamy. The case came up on remand Tuesday. It came out in evidence that the first husband came here from Townsend, Norfolk County, settled as a tenant on Col. Patterson's farm and married Miss Rose. He afterwards left the country, and has been in various States of the Union photographing and teaching writing classes. His brother, afsymer from Townsend, swore that he had been back three times only in fourteen years and that only for short visits. It did not appear that he had during that period visited, lived with or supported defendant. It was contended by her counsel, Mr. O'Neil, of Chatham, that under the circumstances defendant was innocent of the crime charged in marrying Marshall. The Magistrate reserved his decision till Saturday.

An amusing story is told of two of our best known American authors who are both in Europe at present—Charles Dudley Warner and Mark Twain—who live near each other in the picturesque old town of Hartford. One day Mr. Warner called for Mr. Twain to take a walk with him. Mark declined the invitation. Mr. Warner insisted, but to no purpose. Finally he said (and very likely had planned the story before, knowing how loath Twain is to walks): "You should go; it is according to scripture. o scripture.

"No Mark-the-perfect-man chestnuts for me. Where is your authority?" replied the author of "Innocents Abroad."
"The fifth chapter of Matthew, verse the forty-first," was the answer, coming with unexpected promptness from the lips of Mr. Warner. "It reads thus: 'And whose-ever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him, Twain."
