Government's Financial Folly.

Yesterday we showed how Sir Edward Morris was hard up against it in consequence of the agreement he made with the railway contractors to pay for the building of the branch railways in gold instead of debentures. We pointed out that Sir Robert Bond had warned the Government in the House of Assembly against throwing the risks and expenses of flotation of the debentures on the Colony. He pointed out the dangers of the course and the event has proved his forecast true and the Colony is now left to pay for the folly of the course adopted by the Morris Government. No Colony can float 3½ per cent. debentures now. The public are not now taking up Four and Four and a half per cent. loans, offered at a discount, and underwriters have so much of these loans left on their hands that they have decided not to underwrite any more for the present. The Colony is now caught between the Devil and the Deep Sea. On the one hand the Colony is under contractual obligations to carry out the contract for the building and completion of the branch railways, and one of them Sir Edward has told us is to go through the whole Burin Peninsula and terminate at Grand Bank; and on the other, there is no present prospect of floating loans to pay for their construction and completion.

Moreover this is not the only case of financial folly perpetrated by the Morris Government.

As an election kite the Government removed duties on a number of articles, and now they are reaping the harvest of their stupid financial legislation in a shortage of revenue, which will further embarrass them in any effort to float loans.

That it was a mere election kite is shown from the fact that the policy adopted in 1913 was repudiated as unwise in 1912.

In the Budget Speech of 1912 the Minister of Finance, the Hon. M. P. Cashin, laid down the principle that when the reductions of taxation came, it should come gradually. Up to that time in the career of the Morris Government it had neither come gradually nor by leaps and bounds. But in 1913 a change came over the minds of the Morris Executive, and they laid before the House of Assembly proposals for gigantic reductions in duty. The explanation of this mighty change was simple. A General Election was looming in the near future. Mr. Cashin gave specious reasons for the course he recommended which deceived nobody. His forecast for the fiscal year 1913-14 was a revenue of at least $4,000,000, and he held out the hopes of a substantial surplus approaching a quarter of a million.

Mr. Kent's able review of these financial measures showed the unsoundness of the proposals, and the falling off of the revenue since that time has shown that Mr. Kent was right in his criticism and the Government wrong.

It is clear then that the Government is in a hole in connection not only with the raising of loans, but in regard to current revenue, which is falling off and which cannot meet the extravagant expenditure which has been going on the past six months.

The Government is in a hole also about the two defeated Ministers and its members are puzzling themselves how to get out of it.

Moreover, the Government has lost the confidence of the majority of the people, and the country is naturally alarmed and indignant at the sectarian cries such as the cry of Godless schools, which were used to stampede a portion of the electorate to support Sir Edward Morris. The Premier's lot is not a happy one, and his Government is hard up against the results of their folly.

New Geography.

Nelson & Son have put on the market a new Geography of Newfoundland. Such a book was needed badly. It is well illustrated, and written in a simple style which should be attractive. It is no mere compilation of dry as dust facts, statistics and maps, in tabular and condensed form, but a reading book telling the story of what Newfoundland is like and what is done there and then embracing the rest of the world with particular attention to North America, the old country and thus grading off into the rest of the world. It will fill in Newfoundland a long felt want.

You will find Cream of Lilies the best thing to have in advance to protect your complexion and hands from the effects of the cold autumn and winter winds. Every fall and winter as they come, demonstrates more fully and clearly the uncommon softening and healing properties of this delicate cream, and if you want a soap which will further assist in keeping the skin in proper condition, use Cream of Lilies Soap. It is not more expensive on the whole, than the average soap, but it is a long way better than most soaps. Use the Cream of Lilies combination, and you can safely brave the weather, so far as your complexion is concerned.

Have you tried one of these "Take-away" Headache Bandages. They are quickly effective in all cases of nervous and neuralgic headache, and they have no depressing effect upon the heart. One bandage will cure.

Smothered in Wheat.

Kincardine, Ont., Nov. 17.—A melancholy accident occurred here Saturday, by which two lads lost their lives. They were playing in the wheat bin of the farmers' elevator while the grain was being shipped on a G. T. R. car. They were drawn in until the chute was obstructed. The men at work below went to see what the trouble was and were told by another boy. They tried to shove the grain away, but the attempt was futile. The unfortunate lads were Harvey McCullough, seven years of age, son of W. J. McCulloch, liveryman, and Johnnie McGregor, nine years of age, son of Duncan McGregor, teamster.
