The name of the consolation match ought to be changed. To outsiders it gives the idea that it is merely the crust of the loaf thrown to those who couldn't get in on the choice tid-bits. But a rink in the consolation is not a poor rink-indeed it takes a very strong rink to win it. There was never a rink but what is open to defeat and the idea of the consolation is to give a strong man another chance to play his hand. Lochead, of the London Rowing, took advantage of this opportunity and went through the match a winner. In F. Davis, of Goderich, he had a strong opponent, and although the majority for the local rink is a substantial one, there were many moments when the local shots had hard work to keep their bowls around the Some pretty lay-outs were made during the game, and there is one consolation for it is not a match-that he did not lose game by wild-eyed playing. At the fifth round the Goderich men led by two points and when the seventh reached they were four up. After this, however, Lochead steadied down, caught and passed Davis, and had him beaten, as it proved, in the ninth end. In the three following ends, London scored each time and totaled seventeen. The work of all the men on the rink was creditable, and Lochead showed himself a cool-headed and calculating The rinks were as follows: Goderich. C Hazard.

tendance 1.200 SIXTEEN STRAIGHTS. Lowell, July 29. - By Haverhill's de-Spalding Park, McGinley pitched his sixteenth successive victory. It was a most stubborn contest for six innings, when Lowell got his bumps in a wretched fumble of Hickey, allowing 10 4 the first score to be made, which was 5 1 quickly followed by another run, which fielding of the Lowell baseman could have prevented. The Lowells gave the visitors a bad scare > sharpest kind of fielding prevented GOLF.

Tom McNamara, professional golfer to the Commonwealth Country Club. his home course, negotiating the 18 holes in 66, five strokes better than the best score made there heretofore, and of the game he was at his very best. Many times during the match he drove distances approximated at 225 235 and even 250 yards, having been aided in these very long drives by the very hard condition of the course, which gave the balls a great impetus after they had fallen to the turf. TURF.
