"What is your own personal opinion?"

"A short time ago I strongly opposed the principle of taxation, but since last night's meeting my views have modified somewhat. Looking at the question from a national standpoint I would be inclined to oppose taxation. I think the state should show some respect for an institution that show some respect for an institution that has so much to do with the education of has so much to do with the education of our people and has such an influence on the moral life of our young. Looking at it from the standpoint of a minister of the gospel, I don't think the church has anything to fear from taxation. At any rate I would favor levying a tax on all property but the church building itself. Our members are rather warm and almost unanimous on the question. I had intended to mous on the question. I had intended to say all I could in opposition to the proposed bill, but since last night I have decided I will say nothing," were Mr. Manning's last words as he bowed the reporter

A book that combines the best points of "An African Farm" and "Dream Life," under the guise of an interesting love story, is now for sale by John P. McKenna, Bookseller, 80 Yongo-street. The title of it is, "Ships That Pass in the Night." The author has developed the thought that as ships pass each other with only a signal and a few words, so on the ocean of life human beings pass each other with only a look, a word or a brief acquaintance, then comes darkness and silence again. The scenes of the story are laid in Petershof, a famous European health resort, to which came the broken-down of every country on that continent. Here was a chance to study life in its most pathetic moods, and the author, Beatrice Harraden, has performed her work admirably.

Rumor of Another Engagement.

The affair was immediately reported by the official in charge of the construction party to Commander Karr of the British gunboat Mosquito, the report being accompanied by an appeal for protection. The British commander at once informed the officer in command of the Portuguese that he would open fire on him if he did not cease his interference with the work of the construction party, and at the same time sent to Quillimane for reinforcements. The Portuguese officer answered that he would insist that no further work should be done and he, too, sent for reinforcements. Both reinforcing parties are understood to be en route to the scene of the disturbance. Reports are rife that the disturbance. Reports are rife that the produced from his satchel a bulky roll of another conflict has taken place resulting in $5 and $10 bills. PARNELLITES BELIEVE HOME RULE WILL BE ABANDONED:

Manifesto Issued by Redmond, Harrington and Kenny-Adherence to the Irish Policy the Final Test of the Sincerity of the Liberal Cabinet-The Betraval of Parnell.

London, March 8 .- The announcement is made officially that Baron Tweedmouth (Right Hon. Edward Marjoribanks) will be made Lord Privy Seal with a scat in the

The Parnellites this evening gave out a manifesto to the Irish people, signed by John Redmond, Timothy Harrington and Joseph Edward Kenny. The manifesto says: "A crisis has arisen in the fortunes of the country, which makes it imperative that the men who struggled three years ago to retain men who struggled three years ago to retain Charles Stewart Parnell's leadership for Ireland should try now to preserve unbroken the organization and brotherhood established at that time among our race. We address to you words of warning and advice. Mr. Gladstone then declared that the retention of Mr. Parnell would reduce his retention of Mr. Parnell would reduce his own leadership of the Liberals almost to a nullity. His letter contained no hint or threat of resignation or of a change of the Liberal attitude to Home Rule. Nevertheless in a moment of weakness and panio Parnell was abandoned avowedly to maintain Mr. Gladstone's leadership and preserve the alliance with the Liberals.

Test the Sincerity of the Liberal Cabinet. "The result was that one of the grandest and best disciplined political combinations the world ever saw degenerated into a betrayal of Parnell and into confederacy with the Liberal Government which denied justice to the Irish on the simple questions of evictions and amnesty of political offenders. Apart altogether from the question of Mr. Gladstone's own sincerity in the Irish cause and his desire to be identified with the final solution of the Irish question, the final test must now be applied to the sincerity of the Liberal Cabinet.

A Scheme To Defeat Home Rule. "The result was that one of the grandest

A Scheme To Defeat Home Rule. "It was to retain Mr. Gladstone's services that Charles Stewart Parnell was thrown over. Mr. Gladstone's promise was the bond offered in every political platform to Ireland in the past three years. We warn our countrymen, now that his retirement from the leadership can originate only in a scheme to defeat the hopes of the Irish-people by abandoning Home Rule, or through such compromise as people by abandoning Home Rule, or through such compromise as can only be regarded by Ireland as an insuft and a mockery. The removal of the Irish block on the Imperial Parliament encourages tne party of half-hearted Home Rulers in the cabinet to believe they may again safely disappoint the hopes of Ireland. "We can have no confidence in the Earl of Rosebery's cabinet. The time has come for prompt action. The Irish people will no longer tolerate a policy of national subserviency to English party interests. Let them organize the torees of their race to support the struggle for national government."

upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied Holsman, as he passed the paper to the bench. The judge glanced at the sheet of legalcap and passed it to Clerk Melvin. Coughlin half leaned forward and grasped the arm of his chair.

"We find the defendant, Daniel Coughlin, not guilty."

For a moment not a soul stirred. Then from the rear of the room came a cheer. A hundred throats joined in and pandemonium prevailed, no effort being made by the court or attaches to maintain decorum. Coughlin the Queen's Speech Drafted.

The lavishness of wealth displayed

And best of all was Bishop In his borrowed swallertail. A score of splendid carriages Drove thither through the mud, With the aleet who came to greet The latest social bud; Excepting the canail,

Would turn a Crossus pale,

His doeskip vest was decollay. As all such vests should be, And frills galore his bosom wore A gorgeous sight to see; Four diamonds that for a king As ransom would avail Shone in his shirt when Bishop wore

And 'mongst them all strode Archie

In his borrowed swallertail.

His borrowed swallertail. His collar high its fence upreared About his ruddy neck, His long cuffs shone with perfect tone And innocent of fleck; His trousers! When I speak of them My powers begin to fail,

For they were white when Bishop were His borrowed swallertail. British knights were there and Spanish dons And native pets whom cigarets Had transformed into spooks; Great men were there whose bank account

But Archibald outdid them all In his borrowed swallertail. I can't forget that swarry held In Simcoe-avenoo, Though'twas by right Kirkpatrick's night,

'Twas Archibald's daboo; A Chinese junk of fashion he, Full rigged and under sail, Exeter's great Ahkooud of Swat In his borrowed swallertail.
