Our Single-Phase

Alternating System

Is recognized as being superior to all other systems where lighting service alone is required from an alternating circuit. The generator is simple in design and substantial in mechanical construction, the armature being of the iron-clad type. It is automatic in regulation, being compound-wound to admit of compensation for line-loss. The single-phase system of distribution is entirely free from the complications in the wiring and difficulties in regulation and balancing of load attendant on the use of the polyphase system for lighting.
