

forget or omit to make use of them. Seriously, however, of all the measures suggested for the resuscitation of the apparently narcotised, the only ones likely to prove of instant avail are the head-low position, artificial respiration aided by rhythmical traction on the tongue, and percussion over the cardiac area.

Surgeon-General Jameson, C. B., late the head of the Army Medical Department, has retired. His friends entertained him to a complimentary banquet on the 24th of July at the Hotel Cecil. The number present was one hundred and fifty. The chairman, in proposing the toast of "our guest," reviewed this distinguished officer's career from the days when he took part in repelling the Fenian raiders in Canada to his appointment to the post of Director General in 1896, and from which he had just retired. Sir William McCormac in proposing the toast of "The public Medical Services," expressed regret at the fact that there was not at present a single candidate applying for admission. That certainly is not a very satisfactory condition of things.

OBITUARY.

Dr. E. A. Graveley, of Cornwall, Ont., died on the 17th of June. He graduated from Bishop's College in 1877, at which College he passed his four medical years. He was for a long time physician to the goal. He served as Surgeon with the field force during the North West Rebellion of 1885. He was of a quiet, unobtrusive nature, but he made many friends and kept them.
