H. W. An Armenian mechanic named Onnik Erghanian has invented "a very neatly planned little machine for turning over the leaves of music-books." It is described as applicable to the ordinary music-desk, and is worked by a treadle, one movement of the foot being sufficient to turn the leaf over smoothly and silently without any interruption to the performer. The mechanism is said to be simple, inexpensive, and not liable to be put out of order, and the invention has been patented in England and in several other European countries.

At a musical performance, where there was a telephonic connection, not only the voices could be heard, but by the timbre the individuals to whom they belonged could be distinguished.
