The idea that the larger provinces would seek to oppress the smaller ones and that the Senate would protect the little fellows has also proved illusory. The provinces have protected themselves, by asserting the power of their own legislatures, we saw in the case of Ordario and Ale New York which shows us at a glance that railways cannot haul grain as cheaply as canals. The reason why the grain finds an outlet via Buffalo and New York is because it is an all water route from Duluth or Fort William to New York wia the Eric Canal. Let us have an Eric Canal ali in Canada with the Trent Valley Canal, and let us control the grain traffic from both Duluth and Fort selves, by asserting the power of their own legislatures, as we saw in the case of Ontario and of Manitoba. Shea's couldn't seat all the crowd that wanted to see the opening bill at the popular Yonge-street vaudeville house last night. Many were content to stand and scores went away to come again later in the week. The bill is varied and in its entirety seemed to please everyone.
