ROMANCE OF LOVE AND WEALTH DEFERRED

Humble School Teacher Awarded Fortune of $200,000
Bequeathed by Lover

Gold Secreted in Out of the Way
Places by a Miser Disappears.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—After fifteen long years of litigation, Mlle. Turville, a humble school teacher, who was left $200,000 by her wealthy fiancé, has won her case in the law courts, but when she went to claim her inheritance, which had been hidden in an old chateau, she discovered that the treasure had been stolen.

Such is the latest chapter of a romance in which cupid and intrigue are strangely interwoven.

The story opens thirty years ago, at a time when Mme. Chartre, a stout, miserly old woman, lived in a lonely chateau in central France, her sole object in life being the hoarding of money, which she concealed in secret cupboards and mysterious hiding places.

Finally, for greater security, she mined beneath the chateau and in caverns, to which access was gained by trapdoors, and hid away her gold in jars.

Mme. Chartre had one son, Claude, who, when about 20, fell in love with a prepossessing young lady, Mlle. Turville, a school teacher.

The affection was reciprocated. Mme. Chartre at first looked favorably on the proposed match, but later withdrew her consent, as Mlle. Turville had no fortune. The young people counselled themselves with the reflection that the "maniac of Laval," as neighbors called Mme. Chartre, was an eccentric and could not live long, but Claude died first, leaving a will bequeathing everything to his fiancée.

When Mme. Chartre discovered this document she took counsel with the parish priest, and it is alleged, hurriedly; but Sister Juvénal, who attended Claude on his deathbed, informed Mlle. Turville.

Mme. Chartre, when appealed to, denied having the will, and the clergy of the district, who hoped to benefit by Mme. Chartre's death, are reported to have supported her during the fifteen years' legal struggle for possession of the dead man's fortune.

Finally Mlle. Chartre died, and yesterday the Lyons appeal court decided that Mlle. Turville was entitled to the $200,000 left her by Claude Chartre.

In the interval, however, she had been happening at the old chateau. On one night $17,400 hidden under the kitchen sink disappeared, after she followed, on one occasion $10,000 being taken, and when an examination of the old woman's hiding places revealed that practically the whole of the immense treasure had vanished.

The affair is causing an enormous stir in the district, and sensational developments are expected.

E. TENNYSON SMITH SPEAKS AT CAMPBELLTON

He is Not Using Blank Cartridges in the War on the Liquor Traffic.

CAMPBELLTON, Nov. 11.—Rev. E. Tennyson Smith arrived here Friday evening, and opened a week's campaign. W. F. Trueman, who was in St. John last week attending the meeting of the Grand Division, says that it is clear that the definite object of the campaign is provincial prohibition. Mr. Smith in replying said that war had been declared on the liquor traffic. He stated that in a war, some one was sure to be hurt, unless blank cartridges were used. Mr. Smith was a very powerful speaker and he easily holds the attention of his hearers.

The success of his campaign here is already assured.

EMPRESS STEAMERS MAY COME HERE DIRECT

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—It is stated here on pretty good authority that the C. P. R. Empress steamers will go direct to St. John even at the risk of losing its contract with the Atlantic for carrying its part of the British-Canadian mails.

It is said that the C. P. R. steamers in connection with their overseas mail contract with the British government will have to go direct to St. John.

So far the department of trade and commerce has nothing to give out officially on the subject, although it is admitted that the above is likely to be the case.

H. A. Allan, of the Allan line, was here on Saturday in connection with this matter.

BOY REJECTS WEALTH; CLINGS TO MOTHER.

His Affection for Her Stronger
Than the Alluring Offer
Made by Father

Mother Appeals to Court for Aid to Keep Consumptive Lad From Early Grave.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—A pathetic case is now occupying the courts, in which a consumptive boy had to choose between semi-starvation and probable death with his mother, and luxury and all care with his father.

In 1888 M. Jaquet, the son of a manufacturer, was a student in Paris, where he met and fell in love with a pretty milliner named Mlle. Mallard. After four years of mutual affection, a child was born, a boy, who was immediately, as is allowed in French law, officially recognized by the student as his son.

Then the romance of student life came to an end. M. Jaquet had to leave his companion and enter his father's business. He gave her $600 and agreed to pay $7.50 a month toward the support of his son until he attained his majority. Shortly afterwards he married, and Mlle. Mallard, the little milliner, having to set to and earn her living, put her baby in an orphanage, where she was kept in the last stages of consumption.

Mme. Mallard, as she was then known, was a woman of great strength of mind and denied herself the barest necessities to provide for the medical attendance. She succeeded in bringing him back to health. He grew up passionately fond of his mother, who, by great privation, paid for his education in a school for professional mechanics.

The lad passed his preliminary examination brilliantly, and then the dread disease reasserted itself, and all his mother's strenuous efforts were in vain. The doctors ordered the boy to be taken out into the country, and Mlle. Mallard went with him to her parents' home in Alsace. But her little savings were exhausted, and at last she appealed to the lad's father to increase the allowance. M. Jaquet wrote back that he would not increase the allowance, but would adopt the boy into his family. The mother then sought the help of the law to compel M. Jaquet to increase the allowance.

The father came to the bar of the court and repeated his offer. "I have a family of my own," he said, "a wife and three children. My wife has agreed to take the boy and bring him up with our own children. I offer the boy a comfortable home, and I ask the court to order the lad to be given over to my charge."

The mother replied that the boy had never even seen his father, who did not attempt to intervene when the child was ill. "Heaven knows what I have gone through for my son," she cried to the boy's father. "I have twice nursed him back from death. All you have done is to contribute a small monthly sum. It would be cruel indeed, to take the lad away from me. All I want is an increased allowance."

The lad himself, a bright and very thin and consumptive-looking lad of 16, refused to leave his mother. Placing his hand in hers, he said, "I love my mother, and I would rather live in poverty with her than be pampered by my father, for whom I have no affection."

The court reserved its decision until Wednesday next.

PLAN OF WATER STORAGE ON THE ST. JOHN RIVER

Government Making Arrangements for the Forestry Convention.

The committee of the provincial government, who will be in charge of the coming forestry convention are busily engaged in the preliminary work. Several authorities on the care of forests, will be present, and will deliver a number of addresses. This committee will leave in a few days for Augusta, Me., and Washington. While at the former place the committee will endeavor to interest the Maine authorities in providing facilities for the storage of a water supply, on the tributaries of the St. John river. These storages would be useful in the dry season and would also ensure the lumber drivers getting in. At present, in the dry season, millions of logs are hung up.

Attorney General Pugsley, speaking of the matter, says that the cost of providing the storage would not be large, compared with the resulting benefit.

MAN IN DEEP SLEEP OVER TWO YEARS

Remarkable Result of Fall on the Street While Descending a Tram Car.

Subject Looks Like a Wax Figure, and Eats His Meals Regularly.

GERMAN, Nov. 10.—German specialists in nervous diseases are puzzled by the case of a man who has been asleep for two years and four months. The man is a former civil service officer named Arnhem, aged 45, living in Wilmsdorf, a western suburb of Berlin.

During two years and four months Arnhem has never once opened his eyes, never uttered a syllable, and his forehead wrinkled as though he was sleeping.

Before falling asleep Arnhem was a healthy, vigorous man without any abnormal characteristics. It is stated, however, that he belongs to a family whose members have been repeatedly subject to nervous diseases.

Arnhem was descending from a tramcar June 10, 1904, when he slipped and fell backward, striking his head on the curbstone. The doctors were unable to discover any injury to his head, but from that moment Arnhem showed an unconquerable desire sleep.

After slumbering, with interruptions, for ten days, he fell asleep on June 20, 1904, and has not been awake since. Arnhem is lying on his back in his bed in a modest flat at Wilmsdorf, his head turned slightly towards the right, and his forehead wrinkled as though the sleeper is troubled by bad dreams.

He is not merely asleep but in such a condition that his body remains indifferent to all outside influences. All sorts of attempts have been repeatedly made to arouse him. Professor Eulenberg, the eminent specialist, thus describes his experiments.

"The limbs can be freely moved. The skin has lost its sensitiveness; deep needle pricks have not produced the slightest effect, and other incisions in the flesh, painful for normal beings, have not succeeded in awakening the sleeper."

"Defensive noises made close to the ears have failed to arouse him, and dazzling light turned on the eyes has likewise been ineffectual."

The sleeper is regularly fed; he chews the food placed in his mouth slowly, and swallows instinctively."

When Professor Eulenberg last visited Arnhem the patient's wife removed him from the bed, clothed him, and placed him in an armchair near the open window.

"Thus I found him," said Professor Eulenberg, "and I must say he had a surprising appearance. The ghastly pale man, sitting there with closed eyes, had something uncanny about him. The sleeper reminded me irresistibly of those wax figures placed in natural positions in wax-work shows during visits to the belief that they are real human beings."

Professor Eulenberg considers that a sudden awakening is possible. Many medical experts have visited Arnhem and watched the sleeper for lengthy periods without coming to any definite conclusion as to the cause of his long sleep.

GIRL DRUGGED AND HER TEETH EXTRACTED

Police of Berlin Mystified by Remarkable
Adventure of Child of Twelve.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—A child of 12, named Frida Wagner, has had a singular adventure, about which all Berlin is speculating. She was visited at her home by a young man, who said she was an opera singer named Von Sassen, and Frida's aunt. She told the police that she had been with him for nine years, and had not seen her niece for nine years, and wished to have a talk with her. Frida was permitted to leave the school for three hours.

Together, Frida and Fraulien von Sassen drove for a while through the streets, then went to a dentist's, where she was drugged, and two of her front teeth extracted. Von Sassen and the dentist waited to extract three more, but the child, who had come to her senses, grew alarmed, and resisted. Von Sassen and Frida then walked about. Frida was shown beautiful articles of female apparel in the shop windows, and was told that after a while she would wear such clothes and ride in a carriage. Von Sassen promised to train her as an opera singer, and praised the child's voice.

Frida at this point took fright and rushed to a public restaurant, and boarded it, and made the best of her way home.

The police are investigating the story, but the child's statements are so confused and her nerves so shaken that it is impossible to get a really coherent narrative from her. They believe it is some new development of the "Bontarte" case.

Bontarte said, regarding which it might be well to have medical opinion.

Von Sassen is evidently a false name, as no opera singer with this name exists. The solicitor von Sassen is a girl of about 19, quietly dressed, with a winning manner.

FOUND THE AXE WITH WHICH MURDER WAS COMMITTED

Detective Killen's Search at New Ireland
Has at Last Been Successful.

Detective Patrick Killen has made another important discovery in connection with the Collins murder case. He has found the axe which it is believed was used to murder Miss Mary McAuley, at New Ireland. The John detective found the long sought for axe in an oak bin in Father McAuley's barn. There are several dark marks on it, and they are supposed to be blood stains. Detective Killen arrived home today night. Owing to the absence of Chief Clark from the city he refused to discuss his find. The axe will remain in possession of Detective Killen at present.

DALHOUSIE CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Four-year-Old Paul Savoy Set Fire to His Clothes During Mother's Absence.

DALHOUSIE, N. B., Nov. 10.—The four-year-old son of Paul Savoy, of Dalhousie, met with a horrible death Thursday. His mother went to the nearest store for some groceries and left the three children at home, two babies in a cradle and the boy, a lively chap, was left outdoors with orders to remain there till his mother returned. The little fellow said: "Do not be long away, mamma," and immediately after her departure he returned to the house, climbed on a chair, and reached for matches. He set fire to his own clothing, and was found in a hopeless condition when the frantic mother returned.

She saved the two babies as fire had not reached the cot, but all that could be done by medical aid could not save the lad, who suffered torture during two hours. His death was the saddest scene ever witnessed in this community.

BACK FROM HUNTING TRIP TO NEWFOUNDLAND

A party of fifteen or twenty sportsmen passed through the city on Saturday enroute to the United States from Newfoundland where they have been on a very successful caribou hunt. The tour was personally conducted by Walter D. Hinds, of Portland, Me., in conjunction with the Maine Central Railroad, and among the party were officers of the American Biograph Company, who secured some excellent moving pictures, one being of a herd of 27 caribou. The party of forty persons who left Boston on October 17th. Among those who made the trip which is likely to become even more popular with sportsmen from across the border in the future were: H. E. Kunath, Johnston (Pa.); Francis J. O'Connor, judge of courts in Pennsylvania; H. R. Dieder, New York City; John E. Charles, Boston (Mass.); Mr. Ueberacker and two friends, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Miller, Nazareth, Pa.; and Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Bouch, chief operator, New York; Earle A. Norcross, Winthrop (Me.); Harry Arndt, Philadelphia.

BIOMONICIDAL

"Poor fellow!" He studied the French language for three years. "You don't say." "Yes, and then he went over to Paris and tried his best to pass as a native Frenchman."

"Was he successful?" "No, he was tripped up on one word. When he had occasion to write 'sou' he forgot and wrote 'Sioux.'"

TWENTY TWO HUNDRED MILES FROM DAWSON CITY

Correspondent at Solomon River Writes of the Bitter Cold and Wild Storms Experienced There.

An interesting letter has been received from a correspondent of the Star, who is settled at Solomon River, Alaska. He states that the country there is very mountainous and barren. The winter climate is most severe, and sometimes it is impossible to venture outside of the cabin on account of the bitter cold. In a letter sent by the correspondent, dated March 4, 1906, he states that a blizzard was in progress which prevented the inhabitants going out of doors. The wind was blowing at a rate of 40 miles an hour, and the thermometer registered 35 degrees below zero. Those who live in the vicinity of Solomon River are obliged to travel considerably on skates.

Coal is used for fuel, and it costs $27 per ton. Solomon River is 2,200 miles from Dawson City, and is a delightful place during the summer, but in winter time it is cut off from the larger towns on account of the terrible blizzards and snow storms.

There are valuable mining claims at Solomon River, and the Star's correspondent states in the letter that in some places, paying quantities of gold are found only a few feet from the surface of the ground.

The soil at Solomon River also contains large quantities of mica, schist and lime stone.
