LARGER DIVIDENDS FOR YORK SHAREHOLDERS

TORONTO, Ont., June 10.—The vast holdings of land by the defunct York Loan Company in Western Ontario are turning out to be very valuable, and will help to pay off the shareholders. It is estimated that the dividend may finally reach forty or even fifty per cent to the shareholders. The land has been selling steadily at increased prices, and what sold for fifteen dollars a foot a year ago now readily commands twenty dollars or over. 10-6-11

T. B. WINSLOW. FREDERICKTON, June 10.—T. Bradshaw Winslow, for nearly forty years secretary of the department of public works, died at his home here at 6.45 tonight after a lengthy illness from asthma and heart disease. For some months he had been unable to attend to his duties and suffered greatly in the past few weeks. Deceased was 69 years old, a son of the late Sheriff Winslow, of Carleton County, and a native of Woodstock. He spent some years of his early life in Australia. Shortly after confederation he was appointed to the office he filled very satisfactorily for so many years. He was the last of his family, his deceased brothers including the late E. Byron Winslow, barrister of this city, and Frank E. Winslow, for many years manager of the Bank of Montreal at Chatham, and John C. Winslow, postmaster at Woodstock. His wife, who survives, was Miss Bull, of Woodstock, and his four children living are Mrs. W. E. Smith, and Miss Grace Winslow, of this city, Bruce Winslow, in South America, and Donald B. Winslow, of the public works department. 10-6-11

MEMBERS OF THE ROYAL FAMILY SING IN PUBLIC

Princess Christian and her daughter, Princess Victoria, are both prominent and regular members of the Windsor Glee Society, and have several times sung in public at its performances in Windsor. Indeed, the popularization of glee singing, which has amounted to a musical revolution in England of late years, interests the Royal Family immensely. The Queen attended the concert given by the Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society, the Queen's Hall some little time ago, and one of the Welsh chorals was specially commanded to sing at Windsor Castle.

WHEN THE KING SANG.

King Edward has only been known to sing in public once, and that occasion was only a public, so to speak, for it was on the occasion of a "Wine" at the "Variety" in his undergraduate days. He chose the long-forgetting song, "The Ballad of 'Twas the Day," and it is recorded that he had a most boisterous bearing, which anyone who has had the experience of such an occasion will well understand. They are no respecters of persons at the "Variety."

The present heir-apparent might have made quite a name for himself as a singer of comic songs. Being a sailor by profession, he is well known to the rollicking type of ditty, and during his cadetship he won great fame among his messmates for his song, "The Ballad of the 'Twas the Day'." When a more boy, during his famous trip around the world on the Bacchante, no concert on shipboard was considered complete without Prince George's contribution, and perhaps his most popular song was that old-time pantomime air, "Champagne Charlie is my name."

TRADITIONAL LYING.

His young and promising son, who, if he is spared, may some day come to the throne as the eighth Edward, is early following in his father's steps, for he made his first public appearance as a vocalist at the Naval College at Osborne. It is said that ere he began to sing he said, with the pleasant bonhomie which is characteristic of British Royalty, and especially when they happen to be sailors as well, "Now, you fellows all join in the chorus."

Young Prince Edward's choice of a song was none other than that which was sung by the famous "John Peel." It is a remarkable fact, and it may account for the young Prince's choice, that the singing song, with its rattling chorus, was always sung by the Eton boys at all great affairs at Windsor Castle, and the college band has played it for Queen Victoria many a time. Whether Prince George has ever heard it there or not, it is certain that his father has many a time, and has passed on the traditional liking for it to his son.

FINEST ROYAL VOCALIST.

The King's brother, the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, better known by his earlier title of Duke of Edinburgh, was never known to sing in public, but he was an extraordinarily fine executant on the violin, and has many a time given brilliant displays of his skill in public. He was probably the most musical member of the Royal Family, and he and the late Sir Arthur Sullivan, W. S. Gilbert's famous collaborator, were the closest friends. Although the Prince never sang in public, he has frequently sung in his own music at the composer's flat in Victoria street.

Of the Royal Princesses, Queen Maud of Norway was probably the best voice, and she takes a great interest in the folk-songs of her adopted country. The Princesses of Wales often charms her own family circle by singing to her own accompaniment on the piano. But undoubtedly the daughter of our own King is a most accomplished vocalist, and the amiable consort of the Emperor of Russia, is the finest Royal vocalist in the world. Were it not that she is married to a Russian, she might have made a world-wide name for herself as a singer, and at least once has sung in public on behalf of a Russian charity.

THE MAN AND RULER OF FRANCE

(Norman Flower in Black and White.)

In the small town of Mezin situated in the south of France, the wanderer tourist will come upon a blacksmith's shop built against the wall of the cathedral. It is of quite unpretentious proportions, and one may conjecture how a man could make a living there. But this is the shop kept for many years by the father of President Fallieres. Here, indeed, the ruler of France today, was born and brought up. So Mezin is to him the little town, just as she is proud of the man who went forth from there with scarcely any money except that which he carried, to become the ruler of the French people.

President Fallieres does not possess that wonderful spark of political genius which animated Thiers, or in America, Abraham Lincoln. He is calculating, nothing would ever urge him to hurry. In the Senate, his enemies called him the "bitter" because he could hurt at his rebound as from a stone wall. One would think that the hot Caen blood that flows in him, occasionally in the stress of politics, become roused; but they say he has never been known to lose his temper. He is stern and dominating. As a speaker he has eloquence; but he strikes one as being rather cold and unimpassioned, than as the ruler of a great people.

His rise in politics.

For long after he had become a fully fledged barrister he showed no promise of ever rising from the obscurity of which the underlings of the French Republic world jostle each other. But when eventually he was elected mayor of his little town and then shortly afterwards chosen as Deputy, he began to strive in earnest for position.

He had been engaged in politics for four years when he was appointed to a post by Jules Ferry. Perhaps the genius of Ferry was an inspiring effect upon him, for his career from that moment became brilliant.

From one responsible post to another in varying Ministries, he passed, first as Minister of the Interior, then of Justice, then of Education, till when the Presidential reign of Emile Loubet came to an end he was prime favorite as his successor—a greater favorite than the brilliant, hellion politician Paul Bourmer. And surely Armand Fallieres, who at all his life and in his many successful years had been accustomed to severe discipline instead of surroundings, must have felt strange when he was appointed to the Elysee Palace, with its countless treasures and almost unbearable luxury.

AS A BOOK-LOVER.

When Felix Faure was President, he raised the dignity of that post to a state nearly approximating that of monarchy. He loved books, and when Armand Fallieres loathed it, in the early morning, just when the staff-keepers are preparing for day's work, you will usually find the President in the Boulevard St. Germain, with perhaps a couple of secretaries beside him, but beyond that, no guard whatever. He will buy up second-hand books with the same eagerness as a book-lover makes a purchase from the stalls in Farringdon street. The staff-keepers know him well, and know, too, that he will bargain for any particular volume he fancies. Since he has been at the Elysee, the President

This woman says that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her after everything else had failed.

Mrs. W. Barrett, 602 Moreau St., Montreal, writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I have been suffering from female weakness, and despite every remedy given me by doctors for this trouble, I grew worse instead of better. I was fast falling in health, and I was completely discouraged. One day a friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and am thankful to say that it cured the female weakness, making me strong and well."

"Every woman who suffers from female troubles should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, dizziness, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

has carried on his hobby of book-collecting more vigorously than before, and the consequence is that he has two libraries packed with volumes, many of them thumb-nail and ragged volumes—volumes which, in the days of pomp that marked the reign of Napoleon III., would have been thrown on the rubbish heap. But to the President these books are dearer than the Gobelin tapestries that adorn the palace walls.

HIS STRINGENT ECONOMIES.

The pay of a President of France is not large as the salaries of European rulers go, but it is more than ample for his needs. He receives $120,000 a year and a large sum for expenses. This would be insufficient to maintain the state which surrounded Felix Faure, but M. Fallieres reduced the cost of living to about half.

Even the vegetables eaten at the palace are grown on the President's country estates and sent to Paris daily, and attached to the palace there is a laundry where all the washing is done, the saving in this direction alone being worth, it is said, 15,000 francs a year. And whereas President Faure, being a rich man, spent liberally from his purse for the privilege of ruling France, so Armand Fallieres must be living well within the income which his country allows him.

ONE DAY IN HIS LIFE.

To illustrate the simplicity in which the First Citizen of France lives, one cannot do better than take a day in his life. He rises early. Winter and summer, it is all the same. Six o'clock will find him in his study, where he goes through State papers for an hour before eating his breakfast of a well-baked crust and a cup of coffee. Most of the morning is taken up in walking, by the weather what it may; for he is troubled with his stoutness, and finds considerable exercise necessary to keep him in condition.

At "dejeuner," served sharp at noon, he takes a little from three simple dishes, no more elaborate than his private meals at Leopoldin. Even the wine he drinks is of his own growing. The afternoon is invariably given over to work, and after dinner he is in bed at ten o'clock. He entertains a family circle by singing to her own accompaniment on the piano. But undoubtedly the daughter of our own King is a most accomplished vocalist, and the amiable consort of the Emperor of Russia, is the finest Royal vocalist in the world. Were it not that she is married to a Russian, she might have made a world-wide name for herself as a singer, and at least once has sung in public on behalf of a Russian charity.

KEITH OF HIS NATURE.

Though President Fallieres may be blunt with that bluntness which Paris does not take to easily, and though he be but a figure-head in politics, yet he is a man with a big heart. He will bargain long with those who can afford it, but he is generous to a fault when the poverty of others is concerned. He is genial and bluff, and slow to take offense. Master of diplomacy, he never will be but when he extends the glad hand of friendship to a man with a big heart, he will be just as just to the British nation, one may say, that there exists no subtlety of intrigue, and that what he says he means.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Unique

The principal topics of conversation around town is the excellent picture shown at the Unique last night. Lion Hunting is beyond doubt the best picture ever produced. It was taken from real life and the machine operators while taking it were in danger of their lives. This picture has been well spoken of by the press throughout the United States and Canada. The End of a Dream, an interesting and exciting drama. The Unfortunate Pickpocket, a bright and interesting sketch.

Two brand new songs for the mid-week programme—Good-Bye, Glory, by Robert Butler, and the greatest hit of the season, The Moon Has Its Eyes on You, by Wm. Lanyon. Special souvenir matinee Saturday afternoon at 2.15 for ladies and children.

Happy Half Hour

The pictures at the Happy Half Hour yesterday, as promised, were all new to this city. Canine Sagacity is a story of a dog who rescues his little mistress from a burning house. This picture made a hit with both adults and children, and at the matinee yesterday was repeatedly applauded. Fox Hunting in France is a decidedly interesting picture of this great sport, and shows the entire hunt from start to finish. A Snakeless Store provided comedy, while those who delight in dramatic pictures had a particularly good one in A Matchbox's Honesty. The same pictures today, and new songs, Harry LeRoy will sing a late "hit," There's a Room in My Heart For You, and Prof Titus will sing a new song, Whisper, And I Shall Hear.

The best proof that the Happy Half Hour is giving a pleasing programme is the increased attendance each day, and the best advertisement is the satisfied patrons who are advertising their popular house among their friends.

Howard in Entire Change of Programme Tonight

Howard scored another big success at the Princess last evening, the same large crowds attending, and all leaving expressing surprise at the possibility of securing such a wonderful artist. This evening the great ventriloquist will give an entire change of programme again, introducing the Woe Macgregor in several most amusing situations. Macgregor has become a prime favorite with the audience, and they lose sight of there being any connection with Mr. Howard in his performance. Howard will also give his laughable musical sketch, entitled A Country Concert. The low price of admission, combined with the wonderful performance of Howard, together with the fine picture programme will continue to crowd the Princess for the remainder of the week. Remember that Howard will appear at the Saturday matinee, and give a special performance for the children. Uncle Tom's Cabin will also be shown at this entertainment, the price being five cents to children and ten to adults.

Kidnapped by Gypsies proved to be a very pathetic picture, relating the story of a small boy who during his parents' absence is stolen by Gypsies. He endures rough treatment at the hands of his captors, but finally he makes his escape with the aid of his gypsy girl, who takes him home to his parents. The young girl for her bravery is adopted by the boy's parents.

Forgotten Once is another beautiful drama and touched the hearts of all. The Enchanted Bells is a fairy story with many transformation scenes and is nicely tinted. The Scandalous Boys and the Fire Chute is a roaring comedy showing a school of boys imposed on their master, but in the end the tables are turned and the professor comes out the winner.

Mr. Wallace rendered his song in a very pleasing manner and had to respond to many encores. Friday night is Amateur Night and a large list of entries has already been handed in, which goes to show that it will be one of the best shows of its kind ever given at that popular theatre.

De Witt Calins' Masterpiece Tonight

Tonight at the Nickel St. John's premier baritone, Mr. De Witt Calins, will be heard in his most effective number, the strongly emotional ballad, Night, Beloved, Good Night, a ballad in which he made a most favorable impression last autumn before he left for his studies in London. Special adjectives have been imported for this number and the audience will be enabled to sing the new success of Alice Lloyd, English comedienne, namely "Over the Hills," with humorous pantomime for which Miss Lloyd herself posed. The new picture programme is a dandy. A Trip on China's Imperial Highway, a picture of a drama; The Mission of a Flower, pathetic and a Good Goodie, comedy.

Fishery cruiser Curlew, Capt. Milne, anchored in the offing on Monday night. Capt. Milne has been on duty on the lake keeping watch upon the pollock steamers who are operating outside the three miles limit and looking after fishery matters generally. He says there has been good pollock fishing lately. Sardines have been scarce. He has been rumors of dynamiting but the reports do not seem to be authentic.—Beacon.

It is reported that the Canadian Pacific Railway has purchased Califf's Island, Letting Island, and the island, and that it will be used in connection with the railway's winter port schemes at that place. The purchase price is said to be $200,000. Engineers have recently been on the island taking measurements.—Beacon.

Thursday's train brought to St. Andrews from South Africa, Mr. Edwin P. Mallory and family, who came to spend the summer with Mr. Mallory's parents. Mr. Mallory was the only St. Andrews man who volunteered for South Africa during the war. This circumstance moved the people of the town to give him a little demonstration of their esteem on his arrival. Flags were hoisted throughout the town and when the train pulled up at the station the school children with their teachers were on hand and sang a number of patriotic hymns. At the close of the singing three hearty cheers were given. Mr. Mallory was taken completely by surprise. After briefly thanking the children and the people he got into a barouche and was driven to his parents' home where a hearty home welcome awaited him. He is in good health though somewhat wearied after his long journey.—Beacon.

When Mr. G. D. Glimmer entered his farm cottage on the river on Sunday, a gruesome sight met his gaze. Stretched prone upon the floor was the dead body of the caretaker of the farm, Mr. Samuels Maywell. He had been dead for several days, having apparently fallen from his chair in a fit of apoplexy. His wife, an old man and had no relatives in the vicinity. He would not go to the Town Home, preferring to live on the farm alone. Mr. Glimmer kept him supplied with an abundance of food, and some members of the family usually visited him several times a week, but last week some days elapsed without any visit being made.—Beacon.
