The sweet bird that sat on the bough.
Blithely singing its summerly song.
As though it would hallow love's yow,
And the seal of affection prolong.
No longer inspires with its lay,
Of flatters as wings on the tree,
For Ellen has stolen away,
And with her all its music to me.

And with her eit is must be the rain,
Would the sun's golden tints into birth,
And scattered their sanies o'er the plant,
Like diamonds strewn on the earth,
Now refuse their bright hues to display,
From the spell that once held them set free
Like diamonds strewn way,
And she was their brightness to me.

The stars that such rich instre shed
When we wandored at evening alone,
Like angels, bright eyes overhead,
Recepting pace with the glaince of our own,
Have parted with each spatkling tay.
That once was a transport to see,—
For Ellen has stolen away
And she was the planet to me.

The streen, that thro' valley and field,
Like a spirit kept dancing along.
While the harvest sweet perfume did yield,
And the respers went forth in a throng,
Now pauses, to think, on its way,
And babble its thoughts to the bee,—
For Ellen has stolen away,
And she was its language to me.

Oh! Ellen, dear Ellen! whose voice
Like soft music once fell on my ear,
Making all that was near it rejoice,
And the far eavy long to be near;
My hope and my patience decay,
Long wearied with waiting for thee,
Say, why hast thou stolen away
When thy presence is heaven to me?

purpose of the common remedics is simply to give relief—not to cure: this is easily done by an intelligent Physician or Druggist; but while dailying with these deliasive compounds, the patient rapidly declines, and every day places him farther beyond the reach of hope.

Such is not the case with the Hungurian Balsam it is always salurary in its effects—never injurious. It is not an opialo—it is not a tonic—it is not a user expectroant. It is not intended to lid! the invalid into a fartal sectivity. It is a great remedy—a grand healing and curative compound; the great spend only remedy which medical science and skill has yet produced for the treatment of this intherto morour querable malady. It is in fact the best remedy in the north!

[From the John Bull, newspaper, London.]

There is certainty sourse mysterious and occult virtue in the famous "Hungarian Balsam of Life." which the medical faculty are unable to discover, or Dr. Buchan would not be permitted for so many years to enjoy the magnificent monogoly of the treatment and care of Consumption in Great Britain. No satisfactory analysis of this famous count of the public.
