PIONEER LIFE.

Some Phases That Are Now Almost Fergetten in the Province of Ontario-Country Life in Canada.

Recent events have caused the thoughts of many to turn back to early times in Ontario. One of the best known historians of that period is Mr. Canniff Haight, whose book; "Country Life in Canada," is a treasury in its way. The author's memory uncoils like a cord to the time of the Mackenzie rebellion. The memory uncois like a cord to the time of the Mackenzle rebellion. The distant past is magically summoned by the author on the first page, when he merrily remarks that he does not remember being born, though present at the time. He does remember how his father threshed the wheat when the writer was still a baby, and tells of the settler turning the sheaves over and over on the barn floor, while the horses and oxen were driven round and round. He recalls, too, a barn raising, and the custom of hurling an empty bottle from the top of the building to the ground. If it was picked up whole, it was a good emen, if not, well, it had probably struck something hard. The settlers were a cheerful lot, and did not permit the hardness of the life they led to make them pessimists. He mentions the lavish hospitality universal in the early days, and tells how the plate of a chance visitor would be buried under the rude abundance of hearty fare. To toy daintily with the victuals weighted. and tells how the plate of a chance visitor would be buried under the rude abundance of hearty fare. To toy daintily with the victuals was to disparage the host, to have no appetite an insult. In this connection the absolute social equality of master and man is mentioned. They ate at the same table, and one would not go farther than the other in comments, favorable or the reverse, on the meals before him. It was the custom for girls to go to neighbors to live if their own parents could get on without them. In effect, they were servants no more than at home, except that they were paid for their work. The idea of the girl's social inferiesfrity to her mistress never entered the head of either. As Mr. Hæight says: "The fact of the girl going out to work did not unfavorably affect her position. On the contrary, it was rather in her favor, and showed that she had some ambition about her." Indeed, in those days it was rarely the case that a girl shrank from domestic service is erder to be a typewriter. Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in To-ledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of Oar Hundred Dollars for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure.

order to be a typewriter. Visiting on Sunday.

Sunday was the great day of the week fifty years ago. Only a minority of the settlers could go to church, but all could attend to one or two social duties for which the busy week days had left no time. Visits were always paid on Sunday to friends near or far, and one can Visits were always paid on Sunday to friends near or far, and one can readily imagine what a visit meant to people who, as likely as not, had not seen a neighbor's face for a week. Those who did go to church sat on one side if they were men, and on the other if they were women. This fashion prevailed whether in school or meeting-house, and continued for many years after. A married couple who would dare to sit side by side would have been considered "no better than they should be." The visiting coach of the pioneers was the lumber wagon, though there was a general improvement in most conveyances when the steel spring came into use, about 1840. For long journeys everyone rode horseback. Women traveled hundreds of miles this way, some of them carrying children before them on the saddle. It was an age of bees. The men had their raising bees and their logging bees, where whiskey flowed like water (the best could be had for 40 cents a gallon), and dogs fought as long as they could stand up. Quilting bees were popular with the ladies of the period, and one of their favorite anusements was to catch a luckless man and toss him on the quilt. Apple bees, too, were great fun. At these functions apples were peeled, cut, cored, and strung te dry, and to eventually appear as apple sauce. These social gatherings always ended in a dance, unless the religious scruples of some objected, in which case the time had to be killed A grain of sand in the eye can cause excruiating agony. A grain of pepper in place of the grain of sand intensifies the torment. The pain is not confined to the organs affected. The whole body feels the shock of that little irritating particle. It is so when there is any derangement or disorder of the delicate womanly organs. The disorder may seem trivial but the whole body feels it. The nervous system is disordered. There are fretfulness, irritability, sullenness and depression of spirits. The general health of woman depends on the local health of the organs peculiarly feminine. Remove the drains, ulcerations, bearing down pains, and other afflictions of woman, and the whole body feels the bonefit. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for body sees the conett. Dr. Fierce a Favorite Prescription is a specific for the diseases that undermine the strength of women. It is free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics, poisons which enter into many other ways ented in a dance, uniess the re-ligious scruples of some objected, in which case the time had to be killed in kissing games, such as "postof-fice," "measuring tape," "lady's slipper," and "button, buttom."

Recreations of the Time.

Coon hunting was popular then, as now, and spearing fish by terchlight often kept a sportive pioneer up all night after a hard day's work. Wild often kept a sportive pioneer up all night after a hard day's work. Wild pigeons were so numerous, and so easily killed or caught, that one could hardly call the proceeding sport. They were so daring that they would swoop down on the seed grain before it had reached the ground after being cast by the sower's hand. Game of ever sort abounded. One who did not enjoy hunting or fishing must have had trouble in finding pleasure or recreation after the day's work. If he loved reading, and had access to a hackwoods library, he could plunge into Buchan's "Domestic Medicine," Brown's Union Gazetteer, Ricketson on Health, Jessy Kerzey, "Memorials of a Deceased Friend," reports of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Job Scot's Journal, or Lewis' "Dispensatory," all of which would be at his disposal. If these tomes did not attract, he could often hie himself to the school-house and plunge into a debate on the subject, "Which is the more useful to man, wood or iron?" or "Was Wellington or Napoleon the greater general?"

Success in Canada.

"Birkenhead" writes to The London Daily Mail: "My son, who was then sixteen years of age, said to me twelve months ago: Father I am tired of office work. Give me £5 and I will go to Canada. He worked his way out on board a steamer, paid his railway fare to Winnipeg, got immediate employment on a farm, and has aiready remitted most af the money he took away. He writes that the climate is splendid that he enjoys the life, and is developing into a big, strong fellow. As soon as the harvest is over he intends taking up a grant of 160 acres. These are facts, and show what an English lad with grit can jo in a new country."
