THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE.

His Last Refuge.

(By Ben Hurst.)

6

It was one of those inconstant March days when a sudden sun ray brightened the atmosphere for a mo-the dark clouds that swept the sky, berald of another shower. The weaheraid of another shower. The wea-ment only to be effaced by one of ther had more effect on Reginald's spirits than he himself suspected,-he would have scoffed at the idea of being influenced by atmospherical changes,-but the brief ray cheered his soul with a vague hope, as the dreariness of nature, during these eclipses, augmented its darkness and foreignes.

walked as in a dream, and once found himself sighing aloud, so that the attention of the passers-by was attracted. On this occasion he stopped short in confusion, drew out handkerchief and rounded the sigh into a cough. Then he went on again, disheartened at his lack of on again, disheartened at his lack of self-control. "What have I come out for?" he asked himself. "Am I going mad? What shall I gain by laying bare my wound?" He con-tinued his walk, nevertheless. with that blind adherence to a foregone preduction how of the completioneness resolution born of the consciousness that no other course offered a chance of deliverance from the impending ca flood of sunlight burst upon him A thood of sumight burst upon him as the door opened to his ring. All at once he found himself face to face with the master of the house, who was drawing on his gloves prepara-tory to leaving it. In answer who to his look of surprise which preceded the friendly greeting, the caller ex-plained hastily:

"I have chosen a wrong moment, I see. But I also want to find Mrs. Whittaker. Is she at home? I need not detain you more than a few minutes

'Half an hour, if you like," was the answer the answer. "I was only strolling down to the bank, as usual. I am urry, and my wife is not go." He threw open the doc ing out." He threw open the door and, laying down his hat, followed his visitor.

mechanically took the proferred cigar. He was confronting one of the hardest moments of his life. He felt that he was weak; and longed to put his arms on the table rest his head on them, and groan; so he almost overdid the air of jaun-tiness with which he said: "You expect me, no doubt, to ask for a loan? No, it is a greater favor that I have come to beg from Mrs. Whit-taker. I donesey you are aware I taker. I daresay you are aware I was one of the many ardent admirers she possessed before you married her?" r?" Whittaker laughed a hearty laugh through the room.

Whittaker laughed a hearty laugh that rang cheerily through the room. "I know it very well," he said, "and I can guarantee that she has a strong liking for you still. We were sorry to see so little of you since your marriage, and I can answer for it that she will be glad to do any-thing she can for you. Have a glass of wine?" of wine?

of wine?" Reginald made a gesture of refusal. Had the dryness of ms lips and bis haggard mien prompted the invita-tion? Once more he made a fierce effort to throw off the lethargy that was threatening to overwhelm him. "Then you will not mind?--You will ask?" he said. "With the greatest pleasure in life." answered Whitta-ker. "My dear Barton, sit still. I shall ask Aznes to come here to you. shall ask Agnes to come here to you and as I am going out you will be undisturbed rose as the door closed Reginald A little statue in a niche attracted his notice, and with the recollection thR Supernatural power which its presence evoked, he adressed a the Deity. Wielder of his destiny, tde Deity, Wielder of his destiny, "Why should I suffer?" he asked. "I am not a bad man." He turned to encounter a tall vi-of grace and elegance combined ad in a soft creamy gown that aed to make the sheen of her eyes blue. Again he realized the seemed to make the sneen of her eyes more blue. Again he realized the difficulty of his task. Was it not profane, incongruous? They had been playmates and then intimate ac-quaintances; now they belonged to quaintances; now they betting a different sets, and saw little of each

She came forward with outstretched hand. "It is too long since we have met," she said cordially. "How people drift apart in this but What are you doing? How i Barton?" t in this busy world. ing? How is Mrs.

She nodded. "You must not let Lilla even think," sho resumed eagerly, "that you would ever consent to a sepa-ration. How can she dream of it, or mention such a thing?" "She actually believes it her duty," he said brokenly. "It is not, as you have a mere quarrel. In fact, we fancy, a mere quarrel. In fact, we don't quarrel, --not more than other people." Mrs. Whittaker looked incredulous. "What is it, then?" she asked.

Again he stood up. "My wife believes she has develop ed a 'grande passion,' " he said wi a pitiful attempt at a smile. "S tells me frankly, after mature sideration, that she never really lov ed me, and that now she has a the one great love of her life! wishes to divorce and re-marry. Mrs. Whittaker sank back in and that now she has found She her chair. 'Reginald,'' she gasped, using the old familiar name in forgetfulness of all else save his disaster. ''Reginald,

"No," he said, "it will not ou will help me to bring her" must not be! You will help me to bring her to her right mind. Let your poor alone for a time, and devote your charity to the rich who are as much in need of it. Nou have not asked the man's

She made a gesture of disgust "It does not matter," she sai said.

"It does not matter," she said, "what shape the serpent takes. I am only thinking of Lilla." "Remark," he insisted, "that nei-ther of them is, as yet, to blame. He keeps away, and she has been quite open with me. Perhaps an-other man would release her at once, but—I love Lilla. and I know him but—I love Lilla, and I know him for a fickle fool. I shall not give

"Of course not " cried Agnes dignantly. "Your own wife? Of what a corrupt world we live in Tell me what you wish me to do." Oh

"George," said Mrs. Whittakerthat vening, "he knows I have no secrets from you. Can you guess wha ght Barton here to-day? "I think I can," was the unexpect d reply. "His wife has gone mad n the singer Martini. Why do you look so shocked, Agnes? that?" Isn't 'How crudely you put it," "Is all the town talking of it, aid. then? I didn't anticipate this "Oh, well, it isn't quite so bad," he said reassuringly. "I happened to ear a lot of gossip lately." "Men are always full of gossip," she said ''Well, we hear more of the world's ews in our clubs than you in your onfraternities, which is natural," he aughed. "But why are you so con-erned? Are you going to take her "But why are you so con

"If I may," she answered dubiously "If it is not too late?" George whistled a few bars of a opular air. "No," he said at last. "It is cer tainly not too late, and who can overrate the influence of a good wo-

II.

"Mrs. Whittaker? Of course show her up at once," and the dainty apshaking out her silk and vanced to the drawing-room advanced or to meet her visitor. she cried, not quite sure how to ad dress her visitor

But Mrs. Whittaker decided the question by at once adopting the familiar tone that had existed be-aminar tone that had existed be-ween them at school "Whose fault is it, Lilla, mine or yours?" she asked. "But on this niquitous globe, my dear, nothing s done without a selfish motive. Both you and I have as long a visit-ing list as we can well manage, but if you wanted me very badly you would find your way to my house as to yours." a great lady to want little abuttoned the coat of her smart orning costume, and glanced round

"What a lovely little nest you have, Lilla," she remarked am thinking of leaving it," said Lilla curtly.

"Not really? You will hardly find anything more snug, at least in this quarter of the city. But let us to wearily as they wen't down the "," continued Agnes, "but the in-rests of the Home come before sostairs cial amenities. You'll bring me in a pile of money, you witch! I'll walk IV. The first act was over, the lights still darkened in the house, soldy mellowed on the stage, lit up the figure of the man who lifting up his voice, sang to Reginald Barton's to Jordan's, and when you have got on your hat, get in to my carriage which is at the door and call for me

IV.

But Lilla refused to stir and on her unhappy friend and saw u despair that others had observed

'That

wife," morrow

home.

waiting.

the actors.

there

ation." said Lilla, loftily,

George Whittaker made a bow.

with will you ? Bye-bye!

will you? Bye-bye!" voice, sang to Reginald Barton's wife. in a mixed mood of amusement, con-trariety, and gratified vanity, found herself obeying orders. Half an hour later they were driv-ing through the park, chatting freely; commenting on others and being com-mented upon. "See that creature!"exclaimed Ag-nes as a magnificent equipage dashed when he had finished, Agnes rose abruutly, comulained that the piece ee that creature!"exclaimed Ag-s a magnificent equipage dashed "She's divorced, and what's ,--she has married again. But 'her impudence! She expects le to bow to her as before!" nd why not?" asked Lilla, a flush mantling her face. "There abruptly, complained that the was tiresome and proposed to fancy

People to bow to "And why not? deep flush mantling her face.

is no scandal connected with her." "Oh, but she can't expect to be "On, but she can t expect to be treated as if she had not a couple of husbands living, you know, at least not in refined circles," went on Agnes. "Oh, you would feel the same, Lilla." too too. The glimpse of Reginald's face, im-passible and stern as it was faintly outlined in the shadow, which , met her gaze whenever, she turned her head, was added torture. When the last notes had died away fulla still made no move. "Come Lille.1 Wre Whittelem in 'No, indeed," said Lilla. "Decidedly not. I am more tolerant, more broad-minded than you, Agnes. Di-vorce is honester than continuance in a loveless marriage."

marriage. "Come Lilla, I'mrs. Whittaker is tired," her husband said sharply. Lilla rose as if in a trance and mechanically took, the arm which George had somewhat imperiously offered. Before leaving the box, "What funr laughed Agnes. "What funny things you say!" laughed Agnes. "As if love were the only tie in marriage! Duty, which means stability, is the first obligathings you say!" tion and love is secondary. But the and love is secondary. But don't get me talking on such serious subjects, I beg. Until my bazaar is over I refuse to discuss anything else By the way, how thoughtless I am! Have I wounded you by my whole-sale condemnation of divorce? You have ne divarced relatives how you. offered. Before leaving the box, however, she leaned over to Regi-nald and said something in a low voice. George overheard, but with-out relinquishing her arm, he led her to a cab, helped her in and took his place beside her without a word. "It is all no use." said Lilla. "This must end; and knowing you and your wife's tenets, Mr. Whittaker. I feel it out of place to thrust myself on your hospitality." have no divorced relatives, have you. Ah, I thought not. You look much too fastidious ma chere, to be con-nected with anything of the sort."

Lilla laughed nervously. "You are always the same, Agnes," she said. "With your hard and fast Roman Catholic rules you cannot be charitable "I have President Roosevelt on my side smiled Agnes side," smiled Agnes. "I do not see that the President is infallible," rejoined Lilla. "The is, sometimes," said Agnes. "When he sides with the Pope." At which both laughed and dis-missed the subject."

III.

"Well." asked George, after month's continuous intercourse tween the Barton and Whittaker milies, "how is your mission ceeding, Agnes?"

pretty well," said Agnes en igmatically. 'Only pretty well? So you have not brought her quite to "No, not quite. I am less clever an I thought." she confessed than I thought," she confessed. "You see, at first I played to her vanity, her social ambition, her innate dislike to anything irregular or wrong. Then I tried to lessen that wrong. Then I tried to lessen snake in her eyes; we met him naw-at the fancy ball and-George -I told her I found him horribly vul-ar. One can't deny he is handsome nor depreciate his voice,-but ' tried to make him appear ridiculous. This seemed easy, for he is inflated and and seemed easy, for he is subject to bombastic, but somehow she seems to forget all that when he since, and what is strange, the faccination lasts what is strange, the faccination lasts after the song is over." "Has she acknowledged it to you,

"Has she acknowledged it to you, then?" asked George cruffly. "Yes," admitted Agnes in a low tone. "I tried to escape her confi-dence as long as I could; but, al-ways together as we were lately, it was impossible to put it off for-ever. Oh, George, I hate this con-tamination as much as you do, but it was part of the programme we it was part of the programme We It was part of the programme we agreed upon. And then speaking openly at last, I could appeal to her sense of honor, her obligations to Reginald, so loving and so faithful,— her duty to God, her vow given be-fore a minister of her creed,—all that should keep a woman in the straight path."

"Such a great lady to want here me for anything!" exclaimed Lilla. "And here it was that you amentably failed," put in Geor me all about it." "Her vow is not binding there whittaker threw back her boa, there by her creed or the law of most George

wer. "I know it is good-bye to you as well as to Reginald." Agnes remained silent for a Then she stood up, went over softly to the toilet table where George was fumbling impatiently with his tie: 'No, Lilla,"' her hand and drawing her down be fumbling impatiently with his tie; removed it deftly from behind, and substituted a fresh one from the side her on the sofa. "Think of your marriage vow," she murmured faintly. "I have never forgotten it," ans-

The supper was a ghastly failure although Whittaker kept up a run-ning commentary on the audience and off one glass of champagne. "Good-night, Lilla," said Agnes, with forced composure, as Lilla, pak and determined, rose to go. "Good-bye, Agnes," was the answered Lilla haughtily. "I have been a true and faithful wife. Let Reshe longer try to alter her decision. So need to shock or trouble our friends any fur her. You ma; go, Lilla, and you may file your petition tomorrow." "It is acting for the best, Regi-nald," exclaimed Lilla with exalta-tion. "You will also meet the happition. "You will also meet the happi-ness you deserve one day. At last, at last you recognize the truth that there is no greater immorality than the continuance of a loveless union." "You yield, Reginald, you!" cried Agnes indignantly. "Ah, you are all the same, and the good among you can down the bad."

What can I do?" asked Reginald. "What can I do?" asked regument. "There is no use in my trying to oust a man like Martini who has all the charms and virtues that Heaven has denied to me. You are witness that I did my best, Mrs. Whittaker, and the piece gazing at the fallen curtain, as if hypnotized. All through the repre-sentation Agnes watched in agony the empire exercised by the tempter that only when I realized the impossibility of making a stand did throw it all up." "Good-bye, Agnes," said Lillahold-ing out her hand "Good-bye, And her back, her hands behind her back, God forgive you!" Lilla shrugged her shoulders and swept down the stairs. It was George, not Reginald, who It was George, not Reginald, who 'Good-bye,'' replied Agnes, putting r hands behind her back. ''May

It was George, not Reginald, who followed her. "Allow me," he said, as he held the cab-door open after helping her in. "Allow me to tell the future Mrs. Martini, now that she is no longer under my roof, that I think Reginald well rid of the perverse specimen of womankind he had the mistortune to make his wife!"

With that he banged to the door and left Lilla to savor the insult as best she might

U<sub>k</sub> with k "My vor Upstairs he found Agnes overcome rith grief. "My God," she sobbed, "there is a woman gone out from our house,-lost! lost! Oh, George, why have we not prevent it?"

not prevent it?" "Don't fret, Agnes," he said, sootbingly. "We have done our best. We could not conquer the evil tolera-ted by society and facilitated by the laws of the land. Individual efforts are fruitless. Legislation alone stems hornes." "You cannot expect me, MIS. The ton to conduct you to the green-room," said her companion sarcas-an unwarranted insinuleprosy." Reginald had been walking up and ation." said Lilla, loftily. "T do not need to seek out Mr. Martini who leaves here this evening, and will not return until I am free to become his wife. I have just told Reginald that I will not again enter his house. Please allow me to drive straight to my aunt's." down the room. He came toward them now and took a hand of each towards 'Thank you.'' he said humbly all you have been to me. How you must despise me for clinging so long to a woman who had long since confessed that her heart was given to

"No, because it would fret my amother! But no! wife," said George coolly. "And will you really forget yourself so far, Mrs another! But no! Your views are shall follow the dictates of my conscience," announced Lilla. "My demand for divorce will be made to-"Go abroad and forget her," advised George. "Good-night," said Reginald. "It

George Whittaker made a bow. "Allow me to forget it for this evening," he said, "and to show you all the respect due to Mrs. Reginald Barton." In a cab following them Agnes sat silent. The sound of the horses' "Good-might," said Reginald. "It is a comfort to know how happy you are and secure in your happiness." They watched him down the stairs, Agnes grieving over his desolate re-turn to the deserted home. Worn out with sorrow and emotion

In a cab following them Agnes sat turn to the deserted home. where silent. The sound of the horses' work out with sorrow and emotion where sourd and the same sound and watched the light flashing on the wet pavement without re-ful drive. "It is so late," Reginald remarked at last. "I had better leave you at your door and take Lilla straight mathematical actions are located at last. Sourd take Lilla straight was not breakfast to find her hus-sourd and watched the light flashing band still at home although it was band still at home." Lawrence Riley She sat nald. down and Then with Agnes made no reply, for she, too, o had overheard. r "We are all rather moody." he s out a cup of tea. Then with her right hand still on the urn she stretched her left across the table Synopsis of Lanad an vo th-West went on, "and we have trespassed to bim, too much on your good nature of late. Thank you, Agnes, for having so long warded off the blow, but there is no use in control of the blow, but to him, palm upward, "You look so downcast, George!" He stooped and kissed the broad so long warded off the blow, but there is no use in our intruding again to-night. Lilla's mind is made non Land in Manitoba, Saskatohe wan and Alberta, excepting o and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a He stooped and kissed the or cold band on the third finger. J ie laid his check upon it and elt the tears trickling through she her "You must come in, supper will be family, or any male over 18 y fingers age, to the extent of one-quarter sec-tion of 160 acres, more or less. George!" 'she exclaimed in alarm. waiting." said Agnes absently. "Be-sides George and Lilla are already

What is it? What is it?" "How can I tell you?" he said okenly. "Reginald shot himself this What is it? said brokenly.

Barton tasted nothing, but drank BRONCHITIS form with Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold plans (1) At least six months' res caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflamupon matory affection of the bronchial tubes. each year for three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of the home-The Symptoms are tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, and a secretion of thick phlegm, vicinity of the ind entered for, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother at first white, but later of a greenish or vellowish color. Neglected Bronchitis is one

Cure it at once by the use of

SYRUP

Dr.

秦秦 Norway

Pine

Ire Lacoste, K KAVANAGH, LAJOIE & LACOSTE ADVOCATES, SOLICITORS, Etc 7 PLACE D'ARMES H. J. KAVANAGH, K.C. PAUL LACOSTE, I.I. B. H. GERIN-I,AJOIE, K.C. JULES MATHIEU, I.I.B Bell Telephone Main 433

CASIMIR DESSAULLES

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1908.

MORRISON & HATCHETE

97 ST. JAMES STREET, ne Main 3114. Advocates, Barristers, Solicitors,

JOHN P. WHELAN

93 ST. FRANCOIS XAVIER ST. Montreal.

Telephone Main 2270

MULLIN & MATHIEU

ADVOCATES Room 6, City and District Savings Bank Chambers, 180 St. James St., Montreal.

Barnard & Dessaulies

ADVOCATES Savings Bank Building, 160 St. James Bell Telep'ton: Main 1679.

Atwater & Ducios

ADVOCATES Guardian Building, 180 St. James St

A. W. ATWATER, K.C. C. A. DUCLOS, K.C. J. E. COULIN.

GOUIN, LEMIEUX, MURPHY

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS FIL

Hon, Lomer Gouin, K.C., Hon, R. Lemieux, R.C. D. R. Murphy, K.C. L. P. Berard, K.C. J. O. Drouin, K.C. E. Brasard, I.J., B. New York Life Building.

T. Brossard, K.C. H. A. Cholette, I.I. B. Thomas M. Tansey, B.C.I.

BROSSARD, CHOLETTE & TANSEY

Advocates, Barristers and Solicitors. Phone Main 1490 160 ST, JAMES ST, 1491 Guardian Bidg,

CODERRE & CEDRAS

ADVOCATES 8 Place d'Armes Hill, Montreal Street Railway Edg

FRANK E. MCKENNA

NOTARY PUBLIC

Main 2874

EVENING OFFICE : 3663 Notre Dame Street West, 53 Church Street Verdun, Royal Insurance B Montreal.

Bell Tel. Main 3552, Night and day servic

Conroy Bros.

193 CENTRE STREET

Practical Plumbers, Gas and Steamfitters,

Estimates Given. Jobbing Promptly Attended To

PLASTERER

15 Paris Street, Point St. Charles.

HOMESTEAD RECELATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Domi-

Entry must be made personally at the local land office for the district the local land office for the district in which the land is situated. Entry by proxy may, however, be made on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, bro-ther or sister of an intending home-

The homesteader is required to per-

the conditions connected there-under one of the following and cultivation of the land in steader.

cessor to John Riley. Established in 1860. and Ornamental Plastering. Repairs of nds promptly attended to.

STUART, CON & MCKENNA.

Tel. Bell Main 278

S BERARD

ADVOCATE AND SOLICE

M. J. Morrison

C. A. BARNARD

Before our Lady's Our little blue-ey Our little blue-ey Enwreath'd about Was many a gold And in her dimple A rosary of pear

A baby quite-of a She bowed her s And as she beld th With lips of cher Her only prayer-amiled, And "Haily Mar

THE BABY'S

THURSDAY, OCTO

B

Again, again, and Again, again, and The baby breath Her face outshining From clouds of a The while she pr beads With meek and r

Her azure eyes on 'A look of rapture Such as the eyes of The great Archam When first he hailed In Nazareth of you

Twas "Haily Mary "Twas Haily Mary (God hless the li And on the Pater N A chant that coul On Aves and on GL "Twas always; "H

"Come hither, May

MY BA

"Come nither, Ma; cried, "And learn to say No one could under ers! You blunder, darlin "Ah, Blessed Muzzer The baby answere -Eleanor C. Donn Watchman

I take up a little.ca. Trimnæd with ruff with lace, And a dainty cap w But where is the b

And there is a pretty Embroider'd flannel And a blue worsted Aunty knit, But where is the b

There's a big rough t pants. With blue eyes read And a patch of dirt

A study in Indian in

And I lay down 'my with a smile, For he is my baby s

DON'TS FOR WORK

Don't go to public d

Don't go to Saturda Don't miss your pra

Don't read yellow joy hem at any time. I bind-don't help its d Don't be late for wo Don't give less labo what you receive. Don't give your empl to be a benefactor. Ra bread. Take a favor f and you are on most

Don't permit the leas rity from your empl be married or unit is worthless if you are to work, not to

Don't "live to eat, and ice cream and tea Don't break into a

Don't break into a It's far better to be po than rich and impolite. Don't miss your Sund Mass or monthly confe

You cannot sta n of eating nothin

rning

strong young arr my neck, kisses mother wi

Watchman.

"The answer, to that question," he Baid slowly, "will be the explanation of my visit. Lills is going to leave me." The blue of her eyes darken-ed to a deep violet and she kept them fixed on him but spoke no word word

"Yes," he went on, painfully. "As a last resource I come to you, to ask your help, remembering what you were-and are. I have nobody to turn to,-of my own,-in this huge city. Thank God, my mother is too for all is hear the numer of my discity. Thank God, my moments to the far off to hear the rumor of my dis-grace, for such she would consider it. We are old-fashioned people out there -but''-he stood up—"there shall be no rumor. I am determined, cost -but"-he stood up- "there shall be no rumor. I am determined, cost what it may, to have no divorce court proceedings. And-besides,-it can still be warded off, our separa-tion. Lilla is not bad, at heart. You know her, thoughtless, perhaps, but straightforward all the same. but straightforward all the same. Will you forgive my bringing all this to you? And will you help me?" Mrs. Whittaker motioned to him to sit down. "You take things too tragically," she said. "Do not ima-gine that matrimonial disputes are not made the same tragent to the same to be accurate to the same tragent to the same to same accurate the same tragent to the same to same accurate the same tragent to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to the same to same to the same tragent to the same tragent to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to the same to same to the same tragent to the same tragent to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to the same to same to the same tragent to the same tragent to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to the same to the same to same to the same tragent to the same to the same to the same to same to the same to same to the same to same to the same to same to the your exclusive property. As we are here in 'confidence I may tell you that George and I have awful rows.'' He smiled and made a deprecating meture

"You did not threaten to leave him, however," he maintained. "Oh, well, that was perhaps be-cause I could not." she suggested. "Your Romanism, I suppose?" he said quarters. You have a swell you have "Rather! What a swell you have "Rather! r or

Well, I have been work "Have I? ing early and late but it is too much for me. I have enlisted many help-ers,—as you will have seen in the papers,—but somehow there is a gap. papers,—but somehow there is a gap. The fact is, I want one energetic and -hem! well, attractive personality to work constantly with me, if y like, and I have come to beg you to be that person. This is, of course, if Mr. Barton makes no objection. He be that person. T if Mr. Barton make be that person. This is, of course, if Mr. Barton makes no objection. He used to be a good friend of mine. Remind him of it." "Well, thank you, Agnes. I , must say that I envied the members of your committee. This is a great honce --but-iust now..."

your committee. This is a great honor,-but-just now-" "Oh, be easy on that score!" in-terrupted Agnes. "It may not sound nice, but though I was always fond of you. Lilla, I am acting simply in the interests of my bazaar. Now, don't make a dired a bisticon for I the interests of my bazaar. Now, don't make a single objection, for I won't listen. You are going to drive at once with me to the Convalescent Home and see the plans for your-self. Come along!" "Agnes, you should know that I am on the eve of a change in--" "Oh, bother moving!" cried the vi-sitor, jumping up. "Do not refuse the drawer. "My dear,"' she said, when arranged the tie to her satisfaction, "I fear I am a bad apostle." "Look here, Agnes," was the re-ply. "There is no use in appealing to non-existent codes and beliefs. That woman has the law on her side She can get a divorce for affected can get a divorce for affected She insurmountable aversion and legally marry her latest fancy at any time, keeping right with her church throughout, My darling, we can only keep away from such people. We can never get them to think and act as we do. Had we not better draw off in time? Already you have identified yourself too much with her."

down and began ner-Agnes sat buttoning and unbottoning vously sitor, jumping up. "Do not refuse the first favor I ask of you after all the sums I did for you at school!" She stopped and they laughed sim-ultaneously. "I must run round to Jordan's to conciliate Amelie, who will be vexed at my designating the flower-stall to a true and faithful wife. Let Re-ginald speak. I could not live a lie. That's all." "It is really not Lilla's fault." as-sented Reginald. "It is all owing to the convenience of the law and that too fascinating Martini."

"Neither is he to blame," Lilla hotly. "He has behaved Wood's cried

said Agnes retaining Datia notify. Fire has behaved so nobly, throughout, never approaching me since he knew I did not wish to upset my life. We only met by ac-cident as Agnes knows. Our mutual inclination was due to fatality. And we have struggled against it." we have struggled against it.

Reginald laughed, and the laugh ounded genuine.

sounded genuine. "Fancy is husband sitting down and listening to his wife commenting sn her affection for another man!" he said to George. "Thank Heaven, I am a man of the word."

vously buttoming and her gloves.
"What does it matter," she said,
"I could do any good? But you are so discouraging, George!"
"You forget, little woman, that we do not belong to ourselves only.
me do not belong to ourselves only.
me do not belong to ourselves only.
we do not belong to ourselves only.
me do not belong to ourselves only.
we do not belong to ourselves only.
me again for which Lilla was so are agres.
I "We cannot break off suddenly like that," he remonstrated. But prewith again announced to bim that still annot live without Martini and still "Me with not come to

A CREAT record of ct.e., une qualled in medical history, proves Hood's Sarsaparil's possesses merit un-known to any other [12] P'CINE.

with the father o (3) If the settler has his permaof the most general causes of Consumption.

(8) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming lands owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon said land. Six months' notice in writing should be given the Commissioner of Dominion Lands et Ottawa of intention to apply for patent. Deputy Minister of the Interior. N.B.-Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

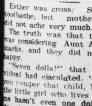

SPECIAL OFFER

During the Month of September, 1908, or until our stock is exhausted.

FREE: Along with the regular premium we will give One Class Fruit Bowl on Stand to every one returning more th n 3 Dozen 6 lb. empty XXX Self - Raising Flour Bags, and for less than 3 Dozen 6lb. Bags one medallion (picture.)

me hasn't even one do beant get the sulks, of Esther did get the sulk t, and mother knew it; not like to be reminded beasant truth. Annt Lou, who was

Aunt Lon, who was aw and heard the whol he did not say anythin When Aunt Ann had goon hed to the forlorn little "Esther,' she said, 'do ne to tell you another as they are for the you have to get up the you have to get up th urine is hot and sca They cure the kidn 6 for $2.50. At all d

E E E

if you DEPT. T.W.

200-00

Mrs. D. D. Miller, Allandale, Ont., writes: "My husband got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for my little girl who had Bronchitis. She wheezed so badly you could hear her from one room to the other, but it was not long until we could see the effect your medicine had on her. That was last winter when we lived in Toronto. "She had a bad cold this winter, but in-"She had a bad cold this winter, but in-stead of getting another bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I tried a home made receipt which I got from a neighbor but found that her cold lasted about twice as long. My husband highly praises 'Dr. Wood's,' and says he will see that a bottle of it is always kept in the house." The price of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25 cents per bottle. It is put up trade mark, so, he sub and accept none of the many substitutes of the original "Nor-way Pine Syrup."