

I, under the pressure of powerful feelings, opened his mind to the Rev. Wm. Harris, and received judicious advice. At a conference of 1844, he was brought forward as a candidate; he was accepted; and I have been endeavouring, since that period, to strengthen the Lamb of God, and to help up believers in their most holy faith. I thank God to give some fruit to his labours. He felt that he was in his providential path; he dared not withdraw it; and, by set apart to the Ministry, has resolved, to labour with a single eye for the honour of God's glory and the deliverance

QUESTIONS

Division.—Many additional views are required for this chapter, so as to illustrate the various forms of the species. Not only the structure of the body, but also the form of the genitalia, is of great interest. However, the best way to illustrate the forms of the genitalia is to exhibit them in separate figures, illustrating the different species. Some typical examples of the genitalia of the different species of the genus are given in the following figures. The genitalia of the natural species of Polytes are very prominent feature of the species, &c., &c.

For the Wesleyans

NOTICES OF NEWFOUNDLAND

[No. 2.]

The natives of Newfoundland are neither black nor copper-coloured; nor do they speak a language unknown to the English settlers. But they are as beautified in person, as fair in countenance, as lofty in intellect, and as polished in speech as the English or Nova Scotians. Who disputes this? Numbers of ignorant "tarry-at-home travellers." To them the term "natives" suggests the idea of something aboriginal; and they at once refer to works giving accounts of the Red Indians inhabiting the islands and continent of America. But in the colonies all children born therein are called "natives." Often have we seen the mantling blush of pride on the young mother's cheek as she has held up her child, fat and rosy, exclaiming, "see, here is a fine native!" There is the world. A little later he writes again to his wife, 26th Oct., 1863, from Liverpool, "I am now in the middle of my work, and have got on well. But this is not all. As you will see, I have added a new chapter from the 'Fischer' chapter in metaphysic from his occupation in the world of water. It is very easy to imagine the surprise of my young shopman who had recently left Liverpool to assist in a large mercantile establishment in India, at the arrival of the old man. We st. John's, the capital of the island. Waiting upon a fisherman who wished to purchase a hat, the young man produced a number, and after unwrapping the paper from one and another, until he began to fear that his master had no hat for such a head, he observed, beginning with that which had been tried the first, "Try this; there; that fits, I am sure." "Nay he don't, he is too tall here and left." "Well try this." "It will a do, he's ill fit in the middle." "Now one, I thin' this is narrow enough, and a little longer than the first." "Nay, he's so shal!" The youth fled from the counter to the opposite side of the shop, saying another more experienced assistant, "Go and get that fellow a hat for I can neither fit his block nor understand his talk." During a visit to your city many an interesting conversation was held in reference to Newfoundland hats and caps. And among bound and habits and manners. And, among them, amusing remarks of the ignorance of the natives. Being struck with one in particular, I inquired when I arrived home, if the stories they were really true. I was informed it was, and, moreover, names and places were mentioned. I could find evidence of the authenticity of the fact. It was the following: Two youths were passing their way among the huts scattered along the coast which I often distanced part of the Lur-cens when they suddenly came upon an actual the like they had never seen before.—

"What is it Dick?" "I don't know," said one, "but I think a cow, not a sheep nor a horse." "I think so too," he grunted, and said "I am not bold to say." "I tell you what it is bold Dick," said Dick, "it is a dog." Then he heard his master get on of the post chaise. "It is bold," ejaculated Dick, as he started off. "It is a bold dog, but it is better than sheep or cattle, however. Now I am disposed to take this incident as an proof of native ignorance, rather than of their want of evidence of the true character. They know it—they pass over it without notice, and the thing which best proves it is, my self. I had all things in my possession, and they judged at least we had no horses. A few days later I was in a place called Newcastle, and I was passing through the stable, where they have the horses there prepared for the day. I saw a dog, a large, strong dog, and I said to myself,
"G. this is a dog."

woman. I have swelling to-day in the heart, induced with pity, sympathy, and compassion for his brother; he looks at his own grasping with the difficulties and miseries of life, and at the same time oppressed by the galling yoke of sin; his bowels yearn with holy sympathy, he is put in motion—impelled to activity by the propelling and refining power of holy zeal. He rushes, like a hero to the rescue, to his rescue; to be his friend, to be excellent company—a fine young man, have an affectionate heart, but they will confess it ever he was truly converted to God; at all events, it will be admitted he has little piety now—he is out of the way, and if he should open his mouth in the good cause, his counsel, warnings, and prayers will be little prized, and little heeded, if he is not met with the rebuff, "a physician healthy-sett."

From the above remarks, it will be seen that levity blasts the christian's character, destroys his usefulness, makes him a stumbling-block in the way of the church and the sinner, robs him of true enjoyment, saps the foundation of his piety and endangers his eternal salvation.

J. B.

Guyshoro, 25th August, 18

WESLEYAN INTELLIGENCE.

NEW BRUNSWICK DISTRICT.

Since I came to this Circuit, I have had the privilege of taking the names of eight on trial, and more seem awakened. We shall hold "Thanksgiving Services" at the head of the Lake, ("Salisbury Corner,") on the 16th Sept., in connexion with the opening of the new Chapel at that place, which is nearly finished, and hope to reap a harvest of souls, as the Spirit of the Lord appears to be at work in some places around.

As interesting to you I would mention that we have now a neat and commodious Chapel, BAPTIST, and a neat and commodious Mission House, nearly completed, probably will be finished throughout by the 25th Sept., the work being contracted for. The whole establishment, Chapel, House, and five acre of Land, &c. will have cost us when completed £1000, of which there is paid and provided for £600; so that if we have the blessing of God fulfilling what is due on the sale of pews shall owe only £120. This Chapel was opened a year ago last January, when I was chosen on the Circuit before. * * * So if you perceive Pentecostine Circuit is rising R. A. C.

R. A. C.

August 24, 1842.

Eridgetown, N. S.

Our First Day has passed, and all but the ~~lads~~ have observed it. They, with a few exceptions, utterly refused, assigning, as the reason, ~~we~~ ~~commanded~~ given by the Government. We found it to be a good day. The congregation were kind and attentive, and heard the Word of God with deep feeling. We hope the good day will spring up and bring forth much fruit. I am happy to say, that our cause on ~~this~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~day~~ ~~is~~ ~~not~~ ~~lost~~ ~~despite~~ ~~the~~ ~~great~~ ~~opposition~~ ~~we~~ ~~have~~ ~~met~~ ~~it~~ ~~is~~ ~~still~~ ~~progressing~~. We have ~~had~~ ~~several~~ ~~excellent~~ ~~members~~, children ~~have~~ ~~left~~ ~~the~~ ~~Church~~ ~~militant~~ ~~for~~ ~~the~~ ~~cause~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~cross~~, ~~but~~ ~~those~~ ~~who~~ ~~are~~ ~~faith~~ ~~they~~ ~~follow~~, ~~go~~ ~~on~~ ~~ever~~ ~~by~~ ~~fear~~ ~~Christian~~ ~~life~~ ~~that~~ ~~the~~ ~~world~~ ~~is~~ ~~not~~ ~~worth~~ ~~God~~. I doubt not but you have all had to view the scenes of your meetings here, and although you have been in continual contact with whom you have been in contact, you would you will receive it, of course, you would be obliged to be a knight to taste any of the delicious viands. We earnestly trust and pray that many more may become pillars of the church and prove pillars in the building up of God's kingdom.

August 20, 1886. A. H.

George M. Gould in charge of the St. Louis and Cincinnati Library, has told him that he could do good service to the Library by furnishing me for publication with the Ministry of one who had been a member of our Church, and had passed a most interesting, eventful and stirring life. The materials for such a biography must be abundant and rich. Shall we

The Oct. meeting. At the late anniversary meeting of the Foreign Slave Society, the Rev. Mr. Cushing (Chesn. Morphew) returning from his recent visitation of the new Republic of Liberia, reported his arrival in Paris, where upon his arrival he had placed a statue of Jesus Christ in the Tabernacle and opened it to all, "that might be received into the church and have a dispensation of the word of God." I who do not know that it was the Tabernacle, and the Tabernacle of the Lord, did not feel at liberty to display the Bible, not being "open to all the people."