IMMENSE SUCCESS

Steam Shovel and Sluicing Plant

Contrivance on the Doherty Claim on Lower Dominion All That Could be Desired.

Now that the sluicing season is drawing to a close miners and corporations who are interested in low grade placer deposits which have proven unprofitable to work unless operated on a large scale, will have an opportunity to ascertain what success the dredgers and steam shovel plants put in this season.

The Ogilvie dredge on Stewart river has but recently been put in position and has scarcely had time to tell whether the anticipations of the promoters have been realized.

Still another appliance that is receiving its first test this season is the steam shovel and sluicing plant of Doherty, Stiles & Doherty on lower Dominion, and it is proving a wonder for the purposes for which it was constructed.

Contrary to expectations it difficult has been experienced this season with frost. The ground was stripped, ground sluiced last summer and wherever such was done the gravel was found to be thawed sufmachine will be in the meantime doubled.

The plant is wholly the result of the inventive genius of Mr. Stiles, one of the operators and owners, and is unlike any gold saving machine ever before used.

Next season it is intended to put on a 23-foot conveyor, which will be gotten from the east, and will be so arranged that the position of its delivery may be changed as the piles of tailings accumulate.

Another decided improvement that will be made in the plant next season will be the doubling of the capacity of the shovel.

Hector and Marsh to try Conclusions With the Mitts—Money Already Deposited

A small crowd witnessed the wrestling match last night between Hector and Marsh at the Orpheum, but those who were present had a good run for their money.

Marsh then took a turn at the bat and said he would scrap any old man any old way, one hand free, both hands tied, rough and tumble or in any other manner.
