The Unknown Bridegroom.

"Go, sir!" Monica repeated in a low, imperative tone; "you know that I never miss fire, and you may be very sure I shall not in this instance, if you come near me. I shall never submit to you again, Carl King; and the first money that came into my hands after escaping from Dr. Flint's power, I spent for this weapon, to defend myself, in case you and I should ever meet again. I am never without it, and I warn you that it will not be safe for you to attempt to lay hands upon me now or hereafter. Florence, please open the door for him, as he seems unable to act for himself," she calmly and rather scornfully concluded, but without removing her eye from her foe or lowering her weapon.

Neither father or daughter appeared to be in a very amiable frame of mind, for Carl King was still chafing wrathfully over his defeat of yesterday, while Inez was deeply chagrined and disappointed over not having once seen Sir Walter Leighton, except at a distance, during her sojourn in the city.

At half-past twelve of this same eventful day, lunch was served in the large dining-room at Worthing Towers, and as Florence passed to her seat at the table, she started slightly and lost some of her color as she observed that the new guests were present, and that one of them was Addison T. Merrill.

She did not deny the man a second glance, however, although she looked steadily at her, and she said to herself, "I have never seen him before, but he is a man of some consequence."

But the moment he paused for breath, she turned and faced him, glaring eyes, scorn and indignation written upon every line of her countenance, and looking surpassingly beautiful in her right-angled and spirited wrath.

CHAPTER XXXV.
"You will perhaps find it easier said than done, Lady Leighton," the baronet retorted, but having himself grown white to his lips with anger, in view of her heroic defiance.

"The law gives a man his wife, and I shall claim you in the face of the whole world if you drive me to it, Merrill-Hayden," turning to the two strangers who had lunched with them—"you are the witnesses of this marriage—are you prepared to vouch for its validity?"

"Anna Folsom," called Leighton, beckoning to the girl, who, until this moment, had been concealed behind the portieres of the door where her maid had stationed her, "were Miss Richardson's maid at that time—you accompanied her to the church and saw her wedded to me?"

"Yes, sir," she boldly affirmed the girl, and glancing spitefully at Florence, "I rode with her in the Lack to Rowdale chapel; those men"—she pointed to Merrill and Hayden—"drove us, I stood beside her while she was being married, and rode home with her afterward. When she got into the house she was so nervous that she could not get into my room, and I had to sleep in the same room with her instead of going to my own room, as usual."

ABOUT INCUBATORS
Best Machines are the Cheapest.--
Directons Should be Followed.

At this season of the year the incubator question is an important one to the poultryman, says Mr. F. C. Elford, Acting Chief of the Poultry Division, Ottawa. An inexperienced person or beginner in the poultry business should exercise the same care and judgment in buying an incubator that a farmer would use in selecting an expensive farm implement. In other words, he should take care to buy the best. It is simply wasting money to buy a poor machine, as it can never be depended upon.

It is not advisable to use for hatching eggs that are more than ten days old, and these should be tested twice during the incubation period. The use of a simple egg tester will enable a man to know what percentage of the eggs are fertile, and thus prevent him blaming the machine when it is not at fault.

The same thing holds good with chicks for the market. The greatest profits are made by putting our eggs, our broilers and our fatted chickens on the home or export trade upon the market when supplies are scarce and prices highest. If an incubator is to be purchased, it should be ordered early, as there are apt to be vexatious delays in shipment and delivery, and it is always advisable that the operator has an opportunity to run the machine for a few days before the eggs are placed in it, or until the regulation is understood and the temperature of the egg chamber can be maintained at 102 1/2 degrees F.

Finally, let me repeat the advice to follow implicitly the directions that accompany the machine. Study carefully the instructions regarding the care of the lamp and the control of temperature, the turning, cooling and testing of the eggs, and all other details. Then, when hatching commences let the machine alone. It is too late to rectify mistakes in management and interference can only injure the hatch. The chicks are only left in the machine until they are thoroughly dry and should not be fed the first day. When feeding commences be careful to feed sparingly. More small chicks are killed by over-feeding than by under-feeding.

A LITTLE LIFE SAVER.

Baby's Own Tablets have saved many a precious little life. They are the best medicine in the world for all stomach and bowel troubles, simple fevers and febrile conditions, and they contain not one particle of opiate or harmful drug.

THE FARMERS' ICE HOUSE.

The season of the year has arrived when the ice house may be filled. There is no more time to lose, as the ice does not melt until the middle of the summer. Where a stream of sheet of water is within reach, the cost is but trifling.

ST. VITUS DANCE.

St. Vitus dance is a common disease among children, but it often attacks both men and women. Its symptoms are shaky hands, jerky arms, trembling legs, twitching muscles; sometimes the power of speech is affected.

WOMEN NIGHT WORKERS.

A Brigade of Them Now to be Added to the Army of Night Working Men. "When we speak of the night works of the great city," said a man, who is one of them—"of the printers, of the surface and the elevated and now the subway car men, the hotel and restaurant and saloon men, the telegraphers and the bakers and the market men, the policemen and the firemen, the telephone men and the newspaper men and so on—we have in mind men only as a rule. Yet there are nowadays a great many women night workers, as well, women who work at nights and sleep days, just as the night working men do.

THRIVE ON A YOLK DIET.

Regimen Advised by a New York Doctor in Treating the Underfed. In the treatment of the underfed Dr. Heinrich Stern, of New York, has adopted what he calls the "yolk cure," and which he says is a dietary regimen exhibits all the advantages of a nutriment of the first order without its usual drawbacks. Dr. Stern says: "The 'yolk cure' is a dietary regimen in which the greater portion of calories (heat units) is yielded by the yolk of the hen's egg and in which the latter forms the only fatty substance. Besides the rich yolk cure, we may speak of modified forms of the same. A modified yolk cure is one in which there is either (a) not a succession of yolk days, that is, when days of yolk are not preponderate when the yolks are inserted, or (b) when the patient, although contained in the diet to a certain extent, does not furnish the bulk of the calories.

FRAUDS OF THE FUR DEALERS.

Public Pays High Prices for Imitation and Bogus Goods. As a people we are very fond of fraud. We don't care much for law, and we love to be fooled. In no line of commerce are we more regularly fooled and defrauded than in the retail fur trade.

IMPOSSIBLE REMEDY.

Doctor (after the diagnosis)—Apparently your system is run down from nervousness superinduced by loss of sleep. My advice would be for you to try sleeping on your left side a while. Fair patient—But doctor, I am slightly deaf in my right ear—and my husband talks in his sleep.
