Carbolic acid is a deadly corrosive poison. It produces vomiting and in-tense abdominal pain and is very tense abdominal pain and is very quick in its action. The victim of this poison may be recognized instantly by the color of the lips, which are burned either white or black, according to whether the acid is pure or not, and by the familiar odor of the poison.

Give whiskey or pure alcohol discontinuous products and the poison.

Give whiskey or pure alcohol, diluted with an equal part of water. The adult patient should first rinse the mouth with this and then should swallow three or four tablespoonsful. Then give two tablespoonsful of epsom salts, disolved in water. Falling alcohol or whiskey rinse the mouth with lime water and give the patient several glasses of it to drink.

SOME DON'TS.

The Rev. Dr. A. Marion Hyde, of Brockton, Mass., has issued ten "don'ts' for young men, as follows:

Don't speak of an old gentleman as an old woman. Fathers and mothers are a s. cessary evil in the present sys-tem of things. They have spoken re-spectfully of you when outsiders could not see anything on which they could hang a compliment.

Don't give all your attention to your education in sport. It is not sufficient training for life.

"Yes!" I answered you last night: "No!" this morning, sir, I say. Colors seen by candle light Will not look the same by day.

When the tabors played their best, Lamps above, and laughs below, Love me sounded like a jest, Fit for Yes, or fit for No!

Call me false: or call me free: Vow, whatever light may shine, No man on thy face shall see Any grief for change on mine.

Yet the sin is on us both: Time to dance is not to woo: Wooer light makes fickle troth, Scorn of me recoils on you.

Lead her from the festive boards: Point her to the starry skies; Guard her by your faithful words, Pure from courtship's flatteries.

By your truth she shall be true, Ever true, as wives of yore,
And her Yes, once said to you,
Shall be Yes for evermore.

WISE ABOUT OWLS.

Jerseyman Says They Can See Pretty Well in the Daytime.

Well in the Daytime.

"I have studied the nature and habits of owls for a long time and thin. T have it down to a fine point," writes a Jersey correspondent of Fur News. "Of what I have read and heard about them I find there is quite a number of great mistakes and about the greatest one is that they can't see in the daytime.

"I once read a sermon that was preached by Dr. Talmage. His text was 'He that formed the eye, shall he not see?' (Fralms 34: 9). In the course of the sermon he said the eye of the owl is blind in the daytime, and I wendered at the remark very much, as the doctor was raised on a farm and was always talking and preaching about birds.

"Now some owls may see better than others, but they all can see well enough. I have often found it very difficult to get within gunshot of the great horned owl in open sunshine. And another mistake is that the unearthly noises in the woods and swamps are laid to the great horned owl.

"It is not made by him at all. It is and swamps are laid to the great horned owl.

"It is not made by him at all. It is made by the barred owl. I have had tamed ones of both kinds and have stood by and seen them hoot. I used to practise making these noises and I got it so perfect that I could call them quite near me, and when they found out their mistake you would laugh to see them take out.

perfect that I could call them quite near me, and when they found out their mistake you would laugh to see them take out.

"It owls are taken from the nest when quite young they become very tame and can have their liberty, except the great horned owl, and he will put his claws in a duck's or chicken's back and to get them loose you have to nearly choke him to death.

"We have about six or eight species of ewis that stay with us the year around and breed here. The great horned owl makes a nest of sticks, lays two eggs, white and only a little oval. They sit on their eggs in February. The barred, mottled and barn or monkey face owis all nest in a hole. The great horned is about the only one that does any harm to the pountry.

The most common is the little mottled or screech owl, and it catches a great many birds. I saw one's nest that had in it three young, one rotten egg, six nice and seven birds. The birds were swallows and warblers. Now that is the question, whether they do more harm catching those birds than they do good in catching mice.

"I once knew two young fellows that had a large price offered them for owls' gizzards. But when they found out that owis had no gizzards they were completely sold. Although the owl has no gizzard, it has a machine inside that separates all the bones and fur and feathers clean and dry, and it is thrown up out of their mouths and nothing is digested by them but soft substances. I have had many tame owls and have stood by and seen them work that wonderful machine often.

"Now, if you take a mouse or a plece of meat and pitch it to a tame owl it will cetch it on the fly and in broad day at that. So that proves wheher they can see in the daytime.

"I read in the Fur News where a boy shot an owl and sent a letter to the editor asking him if they were good to eat. Now, if you take a mouse or a plece of meat and pitch it to a tame owl it will cetch it on the fly and in broad day at that. So that proves whether they can see in the daytime.

"I read in the Fur News where a boy shot a three carcasses of large fat owls in his shop.

"Some of his neighbors happened in and he said, 'Would you like some nice fat ducks?' They said yes, and the next time he saw them after that they said, 'Oh. Danz, those ducks was the best ducks that we ever in our life did eat.'

"My daughter Emma once broiled a large fat owl for me. She ate a part of it and I finished the rest of it and it certainly was O. K. Now if you don't believe it, try one and then you will know for yourself.

"The eyeballs of the owl are stationary in the skull and don't move about like other birds' and animals' and I think that is the cause of their bobbing their leads in all diricctions."

COINS AND MEDALS MOULDED IN THE MINT.

THE MINT.

The mint does not buy old coins nor paper money, except certain rare Colonial coins in fine condition, desired for the mint's cabinet. Mutilated or uncurrent Urited States gold and silver coin is purchased as bullion. The mint has no pattern pieces for sale; and the Government pays no premium for the return of its coins or paper money.

New coins cannot be struck in this country in the absence of authorization by Congress. The mint supplies United States coins only and not of any past date. The $50 gold piece and the nair-dellar and quarter-dellar pieces in gold were struck by private parties on the Pacific Coast during the '49 period, and not by the Federal Government.

The colnage of the following coins ceated in the years named: The half-cent, copper, in 1857; one cent, nickel, 1861; half-dime and three cent, silver, and two cent, bronze, in 1873; twenty cent, silver, 1878; trade dollars, 1883; one cell, and three dollar, gold, and three cent, nickel, 1889. The Columb a half-diller was coined in 1892, and the Isabella quarter in 1893. The Lafayette dollar was struck in 1892, the date on the coin (160) being that of the unveiling of the numerial.

Certain markings indicating the place was struck in 1829, the date on the coin (1900) being that of the unveiling of the (1900) being that of the unveiling of the numerial.

Certain markings indicating the place of coinage, are to be seen on our coins. Those struk at the Philadelphia Mint have no mint mark, but those struck at all other mints are distinguished by a small letter on the reverse, near the bottom. These letters are: "C" for Charlotte, N. C., discontinued in 1861; "CU for Carson City, Nev., discontinued in 1831; "O" for New Orleans, and "S" for San Francisco.

The coins of the United States now authorized by law are: In gold, double eagle, caple, half-dollar, quarter-dollar and dime; minor, five cent nickel, and one cent bronze.

Proof sets of both gold and silver coins are to be had by purchase from the mint. When business there is slack medals may be struck from dies furnished by individuals, public institutions and incorporated societies, at a charge sufficient to cover the cost of the operation and the value of the metal.—From the Scientific American.

LOOSE WINDOW SILLS.

A little boy who was looking at a new Aftitle boy who was looking at a new brick house the other day told his father that they had forgotten to fasten the windowsils down, as there was no mortar under any of them.

The reason that the windowsils in a brick house are left without any mortar under them is to prevent them from being broken in two at the middle.

ing broken in two at the middle. As all houses settle a little after they are first built the piers at the side of the windows would press the ends of the windowsil's down, and if the middle was held up by bricks and mortar the sill would break in two.

It is sometimes a very difficult thing to avoid this tendency of the settling to crack stone sills or plinths some time after the building is finished. It you ever go to the Library of Congress at li you ever go to the Library of Congress at Washington and look at the plinths under the beautiful Corinthian columns of white marble in the main entrance hall the control of them have white matrice in the main entrance han you will see that most of them have been cracked in that way, and it was impossible to take them out and put in plinth and base in one piece without taking down the whole building.

Woman's Death Not Publicly Mourned.

Mourned.

No matter what the social status of a Palestine woman may be in strictest oftedience to the honored Oriental rules, her decease is not publicly lamented nor is the community as a whole affected in any particular way by any manifest of bereavement on her account.

When, on the other hand, a prominent maic member of a clan or family in the smaller towns or country villages of Palestine departs this life there is then much ado by way of ceremonial and ritual performed in order to express in due form a correct idea of the loss sustained to the whole countryside. On such ocsions "days of lamentation" extending from seven to forty days, according to the miportance of popularity of the deceaser, are observed, during each of which one or more sheep are slaughtered "in atonement for his soul," and a feast spread before the assembled mourners.—From the London Graphic.

JANE AUSTEN AT BATH.

Bath, where it has been decided to erect a pedestal in memory of Jane Austen, was the home of the novelist from 1801 to 1803. Her father, whose health had broken down, removed thither from Steventon, leaving his son James in charge of the rectory as locum tenens.

The daughters did not seem to have been consulted with regard to this change of plans. Miss Constance Hill, in he "Jane Austen, Her Homes and Her book, "Jane Austen, Her Homes and Her Friends," says that, "coming one day from a walk, as they entered the room their mother greeted them with the intelligence: Well, girls, it is all settled. We have decided to leave Steventon and go to Bath.' To Jane, who had not heard been from home and who had not heard much about the matter. much about the matter, it was such a shock that she fainted away." Although both "Northanger Abbey" and "Persua-sion" deal very largely with Bath, neither of them was written in that city.— Westminster Gazette.

TAILORS' THIMBLES.

If you have ever noticed a tailor's thimble you must have observed that it is not like the one your mother or your sisters use, because it has no top. As there is a reason for everything, there is a reason for this.

The stuff your mother sews on is usu elly very light and the needle is easily pushed through by pressing the top of the thimble against the needle. But tailors often have to sew very coarse and heavy material and they cannot get enough pressure on the top of the thim-ble, so they use the side and therefore they have no use for a top.

B.t the age between 70 and 80 appears almost as fruitful, being 23 per cent. of great acts.

If we are to believe Dr. William A. N. Rerland, the compiler of these statistics, 66 per cent. of the most remarkable things done by the 100 of the most remarkable men of all history were the product of their lives after they were 50 years old. "The Age of Mental Virility" is a book of interest. This is cheerful reading. We are all looking forward to at least 80 years. That our best results should be after we are 59 is good news.

But there are two or three ifs in the way The compiler worked with 100 of the best of our species. These were men, superior human animals, their superiority extending through all their being—physical, mental, spiritual. The ordinary human animal may doubt his part in such vitasity. None of the great hundred were dry goods clerks, railroad condustors, housewives, or any other of the type of plain everyday tollers, such as we are. MINISTERS' SALARIES.

(Montreal Witness.)

(Montreal Witness.)

There is no religious tenet that has taken so strong a hold of the popular mind of to-day as that the clergy should be unworldly and should live attogether above and beyond any consideration for this world's comfort. The idea that a minister should get a good salary is accounted by many a popular declaimer as a sufficient condemnation of all religion. It is, according to the advocates of the people, for such that religion exists. This tenet is hugged in the very face of the fact that the average minister is kept on an allowance that makes his life one of anxious, and if grace is not abundant, narrowing penury, with abundant remuneration often than a bricklayer, and that often obtained under aimost numiliating circumstances. Such are their conditions that they are expected to take advantage of and to plead for special privileges of cheap tickets and discounts, some of them embarrassing to self-respect. Those who think such conditions ideal for the clergy might perhaps ask themselves whether the minister owes his Saviour more than they do, or whether what is so good for the minister's soul might not benefit themwhether what is so good for the r's soul might not benefit

WRONG TREATMENT. (Montreal Herald.)

An attempt to commit suicide is in the eyes of our law a crime; but it is also in the eyes of most people of modern views a pretty good evidence of disordered nerves or intelect. The distressing scenes which accompanied the arrest and taking to jail yesterday of a young woman charged with this offence were such as to suggest that some unsuccessful would-be suicides may be very different fro mordinary criminals. How would it be, for a change, to act on the assumption of derangement rather than on that of crime, and to defer the prosecuting of the unfortunate victim until the doctors have had a chance to say whether he or she was responsible?

ANIMALS AND TOBACCO.

Experiments were made upon rabbits placed as nearly as possible in conditions similar to those of a smoker. In the side of a glass bell jar, under which the rabbit was placed, a hole was made on a level with the animal's nostrils; into this hols a cigarette was introduced. By another orifice a slow respiration was made. By this means the combustion of the cigarette was kept up. It was consumed in from twelve to fifteen minutes. Half an hour later the jar was ventilated. The rabbit thus respired every day, in from six to eight hours, the smoke of ten cigaarettes; that is, from twenty to twenty-five grammes of tobacco rich in niconne.

From the first week the rabbits subjected to this treatment showed much excitation, difficulty of breathing, and an abundant production of nasal mucaus. Then there was noted a slackening in their movements and a loss of appetite. But the rabbits had become used to the smoke, and no longer showed signs of excitation. In all the rabbits, however, after some time there could be nected progressive wasting.

Experiments made with complete and incomplete extracted, showed that this wasting is due not only to the loss of appetite, but that the tobacco smoke contains, besides the nicotine, a substance which has paralysing effects and which brings about the wasting of the animal.
