 Hagar's Secret...

By Mrs. M. J. Holmes...

"I wish he would write something besides that," she thought, "for I remember him now altogether too much for my own good;" and then she wondered "what he would have said that morning if she had not been so cross."

said that morning if she had not been so cross."

Very little was said to her of him by Madam Conway, who, having learned that he was not going to England, and would ere long return to them, concluded for a time to let the matter rest, particularly as she knew how much Maggie was already interested in one whom she had resolved to hate. Feeling thus confident that all would yet end well, Madam Conway was in unusually good spirits, save when thoughts of Mrs. Douglas, Sr., obtruded themselves upon her. Then, indeed, in a most unenviable state of mind, she repined at the disgrace which Theo repined at the disgrace which had brought upon them, and charged Maggie repeatedly to keep it a secret from Mrs. Jeffrey and Anna, the first of whom made many quiries concerning the family, which she supposed, of course, was very aristocratic.

One day toward the last of November there came to Madam Conway a letter from Mrs. Douglas, Sr., wonderful alike in composition and appearance. Directed wrong side up, sealed with a wafer, and stamped with a thimble, it bore an appropriate to the composition of the compo unmistakable resemblance to its writer, who expressed many regrets that "she had not known in the time on't who her illustrious visitors were. "If I had known," she wrote, "I

"If I had known," she wrote, "I should have sot the table in the parlor certing, for though I'm plain and homespun, I know as well as the next one what good manners is, and do my endeavors to practice it. But do tell a body," she continued, "where you was, muster day in Wooster. I knocked and pounded enough to raise the dead, and no-body answered. I never potticed you body answered. I never noticed you was deaf when you was here, though Betsy Jane thinks she did. If you be, I'll send you up a receipt for a kind of intment which Miss Sam Babbit invented, and which cures

"Theodoshy has been to see us, and though, in my way of thinkin', she ain't as handsome as Margaret, she looks as well as the ginerality of women. I liked her, too, and as soon as the men's winter clothes is off my hands, I calkerlate to have a cuiltin', and finish un another bad. quiltin', and finish up another bed-quilt to send her, for, man-like, George has furnished up his rooms with all sorts of nicknacks, and got only two blankets and two Marsales spreads for his bed. So I've sent spreads for his bed. So I've sent 'em down the herrin'bone and risin' sun quilts for every-day wear, as I don't believe in usin' your best things all the time. My old man says I'd better let 'em alone; but he's got some queer ideas, thinks you'll snift your nose at my letter, and all that, but I've got more charity for folks, and well I might have bein' that's my name.

CHARITY DOUGLAS."

To this letter were appended three different postscripts. In the first Madam Conway and Maggie were cordially invited to visit Charlton again; in the second Betsey Jane sent her regrets; while in the third Madam Conway was particularly requested to excuse haste and a bad pen.

"Disgusting creature!" was Madan Conway's exclamation, as she finished reading the letter; then, tossing it into the fire, she took up another one, which had come by the same mail and was from Theo herself.

She happily found relief from her terrible suffering by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

A remedy without a rival for the cure of all diseases and troubles arising from bad blood. A record extending over a quarter of a century and thousands of testimonials will prove this. Mrs. Deitz writes : "Too weak to work, tortured with the pain of ulcers, boils and pimples all over my body especially on my face. I had almost made up my mind to give up trying to have them cured. I was ashamed to have any person come to see me, my face was in such a terrible state. I tried everything I could think of but got worse and worse. I was then led to try Burdock Blood Bitters and was surprised at the wonderful change the first bottle made. Altogether I took seven bottles and am now completely cured and am in perfect health again. I feel that weak to werk, tortured with the pain o

I was so bad with kidney trouble that I could not get around the house. My feet and ankles were so swollen and painful that I could get no rest day or night. After dwelling at length upon the numerous calls she made, the parties she attended, the compliments she received, and her curiosity to know why her grandmother came back that day, she spoke of her recent visit in

"You have been there, it seems," she wrote, "so I need not particularize, though I know how shocked and disappointed you must have been; and I think it very kind in you not to have said anything upon the subject, except that you called there subject, except that you called there, for George reads all my letters, and I would not have his feelings hurt. He had prepared me in a measure for the visit, but the reality was even worse than I anticipated. And, still, they are the kindest-hearted people in the world, while Mr. Douglas is a man they say of excellent glas is a man, they say, of excellent sense. George never lived at home much, and their heathenish ways mortify him, I know, though he never says a word, except that they are his parents his parents.

"People here respect George, too, quite as much as if he were a Conway, and I sometimes think they like him all the better for being so kind to his old father, who comes frequently to the store. Grandma, I begin to think differently of some things from what I did. Birth and blood do not make much difference in this country, at least; and still I must acknowledge that I should feel dreadfully if I did not love George and know that he is the kindest husband in the world."

The letter closed with a playful insinuation that as Henry Warner had had unwittingly brought upon the Conway line.

For a long time after finishing the above, Madam Conway sat rapt in thought. Could it be possible that during all her life she had labored under a mistake? Were birth and family rank really of no consequence? Was George just as worthy of respect as if he had descended directly from the Sections. of respect as it he had descended directly from the Scottish race of Douglas, instead of belonging to that vulgar woman? "It may be so in America," she sighed, "but it is not true of England," and sincerely hoping that Theo's remark concerning Mr. Carrollton might prove true, she laid saids the letter and for the reaside the letter mainder of the day busied herself with preparations for the return of Arthur Carrollton, who had written that he should be with them on the first of December.

The day came, and, unusually excited, Maggie flitted from room to room, seeing that everything was in room, seeing that everything was in order, wondering how he would meet her, and if he had forgiven her for having been so cross at their last interview in the woods. The effect of every suitable dress in her wardrobe was tried, and she decided at last upon a crimson and black merino, which harmonized well with her dark eyes and hair. The dress was singularly becoming, and feeling dark eyes and hair. The dress was singularly becoming, and, feeling quite well satisfied with the face and form reflected by her mirror, she descended to the parlor, where any doubts she might have had concerning her personal appearance were put to flight by Anna Jeffrey, who, with a feeling of envy, asked 'if she had the scarlet fever!'' referring to her bright color, and saying, she had the scarlet fever!" referring to her bright color, and saying, "she did not think too red a face becoming to any one, particularly to Margaret, to whom it gave a blow-sy look, such as had more than once heard Mr. Carrollton say he did not like to see!"

Margaret knew well that the dark-browed girl would give almost anything for the roses blooming on her cheeks; so she made no reply, but simply wished Anna would return to England, as for the last two months she had talked of doing. It was not quite dark, and Mr. Carrollton, if he came that night, would be with them soon. The car whistle had sounded some time before, and Maggie's quick ear caught at last the noise of the bells in the distance. Nearer and nearer they came; the sleigh was at the door, and, forgetting everything but her own happiness, Maggie ran out to meet their guest, nor turned her Margaret knew well that the dark-changed.

"Are you sick?" she asked, and her voice expressed the deep anxiety she felt.

she felt.
Forcing back a slight cough and smiling down upon her, he answered, cheerfully: "Oh, no, not sick. Canada air does not agree with me, that's all. I took a severe cold soon after my arrival in Montreal," and the cough he had attempted to stifle now burst forth, sounding to Maggie, who thought only of consumption, like an echo from the grave.

"Oh, I am so sorry," she answered, sadly, and her eyes filled with tears, which she did not try to conceal, for, looking through the window across the snow-clad field on which the winter moon was shining, she saw instinctively another grave beside that of her mother.

Madam Conway had not yet appeared, and as Anna Jeffrey just then left the room Mr. Carrollton was for some moments alone with

Instantly the bright blushes stole over Maggie's face and neck, for the remembered the time when once she remembered the time when once she remembered the time when once before he had asked her a similar question. Not now, as then, did she turn from him away, but she answered frankly: "Yes, they are. You look so pale and thin, I'm sure you must be ill."

Whether Mr. Carrollton liked blowsy complexions or not, he certainly admired Maggie's at that moment, and, drawing her closer to his side, he said, half playfully, half earnestly: "To see you thus anxious for me. Maggie, more than atones for your waywardness when last we for me. Maggie, more than atones for your waywardness when last we parted. You are forgiven, but you are unnecessarily alarmed. I shall be better soon. Hillsdale air will do me good, and I intend remaining here until I am well again. Will you nurse me, Maggie, just as my sister. Helen would do, were she here?"

The right chord was touched, and all the soft, womanly qualities of Maggie Miller's nature were called forth by Arthur Carrollton's failing health. For several weeks after his arrival at Hillsdale he was a confirmed, sixelid high all day woon. firmed invalid, lying all day upon the sofa in the parlor ,while Maggie read to him from books which he selected, partly for the purpose of amusing himself, and more for the selected, partly for the purpose of amusing himself, and more for the sake of benefiting her and improving her taste for literature. At other times he would tell her of his home beyond the sea, and Maggie, listening to him while he described its airy halls, its noble parks, its shaded walks and musical fountains, would sometimes wish aloud that she would sometimes wish aloud that she might one day see that spot which might one day see that spot which seemed to her so much like paradise. He wished so, too, and oftentimes when with half-closed eyes, his mind was wandering amid the scenes of his youth, he saw at his side a queenly figure, with features like those of Maggie Miller, who each day was stealing more and more inday was stealing more and more in-to his heart, where love for other than his nearest friends had never before found entrance. She had many faults, he knew, but these he sed both the will and the power to correct, and as day after day she sat reading at his side, he watched her bright, animated face, thinking what a splendid woman she would make, and wondering if an Ameri-can rose like her would bear transplanting to English soil.

SHAKE OFF THAT SPRING FRELING

Dodd's Kidney Pills Will Do it Naturally and Well

Cause And Cure of the Tired Feeling That is Epidemic at This Season of the Year.

That is Epidemic at This Season of the Year.

The spring is here. You can feel it in every part of your body. Your clothes are too heavy and though you are not sick, you are too tired to wark, too tired to work, yes, even too tired to eat.

It's that "spring feeling."

Do you know the cause of It? No, all you want to know is how to get it'd of it. Well, the explanation and the cure are alike simple.

In the winter you "get used" to the cold, you think. As a matter of fact it is the body that gets prepared. It puts on a fortification of extra tissue that keeps the cold out. In the spring time this tissue its thrown off by the body and if the system is all in good working order, the blood carries away the cast-off tissue, which is in turn filtered out of the blood by the Kidneys, and expelled from the body.

This means extra work for the Kidneys, and if they are at all tired or worn they fail in their work. The result is clogged circulation and that tired spring feeling.

The cure is to tone up the Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy Kidneys, with Bodd's Kidney Pills make healthy Kidneys. Healthy Kidneys quickly cleanse the blood of all impurities and the "spring feeling" is replaced with a vigor of body and buoyancy of spirit that makes work a pleasure.
