

The Pandora Broiler

The biggest steak is not too big for the Pandora Broiler door. Successful broiling must be done quickly over a hot fire. You can get the hottest fire you want in five minutes by the drafts of the Pandora range, and without waste of coal.

The best way to cook a good steak is to broil it, and the best way to broil it is on a Pandora range.

DAWN MILLS

The attendance at the Methodist Church on Sunday evening was small. This seems strange, as the evening was fine, they have a nice church, the pastor is a good man and a good preacher, and it seems a pity that his efforts are not more appreciated.

John W. Snary, an old resident and successful farmer, who lived a short distance up the river, died last Monday, after a long illness, aged 74 years. The deceased was twice married and leaves a widow and grown up family. The funeral took place on Thursday to the Butler Cemetery and was largely attended, the service being conducted by Rev. Mr. Sawyer, of Florence.

A large number attended the sale of T. W. Blackburn on Thursday. Mr. Blackburn has rented his farm for a term of years, and intends moving to Detroit. The stock and household furniture were good and in fine condition, and good prices were realized. Something rather unusual at sales in the country was the attendance of a large number of ladies, who were very strong competitors in the bidding on the household effects.

James and Mrs. Elgie were Chatham visitors on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Corbett, nee Miss Martha Elgie, of Zone, visited at Albert Elgie's last week.

Mrs. Dean and Miss Mooney, of Dresden, were recent visitors at the residence of Willard Oliver.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn and family paid a visit to F. J. Harris during the week.

Mr. Burgess, Jr., and Mr. McLean were guests of W. T. Pringle last week.

Miss Jane Keech, of Kalamazoo, Mich., were recent guests of W. H. Traxler.

Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Wm. Gifford visited their mother, Mrs. Campion, at Tupperville.

STRICTURE AND KIDNEY DISEASE CURED.

"I had stricture for eleven years. It finally brought on Bright's Disease of the kidneys. I had an uncomfortable shooting pain in the groin and feeling as though something was in the urethra. My back was weak and I could scarcely stoop over. Urine was full of sediment. Had a desire to urinate frequently. Family doctors, so-called specialists, patent medicines, electric belts, all failed. I was discouraged. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I consulted Dr. Kennedy & Kergan as the last resort. I had heard a great deal about them and concluded from the fact that they had been established over 25 years that they understood their business. I am delighted with the results. In one week I felt better and in a few weeks was entirely cured. Have gained sixteen pounds in weight."

PATERNAL LEGISLATION

PARADISE ON THE EARTH ESTABLISHED AS BY LAW.

Some of the Details of the Labor Controlling System—State Life Insurance and Public Trust Office—Children Are Protected With Special Solicitude—Payment of Wages.

If laws can make a paradise for the working man, New Zealand is surely such a paradise, for his interests are here hedged about with barbed-wire laws which it would seem impossible for the most grasping capitalist or the most soulless corporation to break through, writes Dr. Francis E. Clark. Children are protected with special solicitude. A number of trades deemed noxious are forbidden them, like silvering mirrors, dipping lucifer matches, etc. Women and children under sixteen must be paid a minimum wage of five shillings and girls a minimum of four shillings per week. Moreover a weekly half holiday is everywhere compulsory. Shops and factories must close at 1 o'clock on Saturdays, unless the local authorities as to sometimes the case, elect Wednesday, more often Thursday, or some other day of the week for the half holiday. Almost universal satisfaction is expressed with the working of this law. Business men admit that the volume of their business has not been reduced, they at first feared, and a well-known authority on New Zealand affairs declares: "There is, perhaps, no other among the labor enactments that has conferred such obvious benefit, with so little injury and so little friction, as these clauses which have added half a day a week to the leisure of the community."

Without a Strike.

So far from regretting the formation of labor unions or opposing them, New Zealanders encourage them, and the very act of Parliament which ten years ago established compulsory arbitration is entitled "An Act to encourage the formation of industrial unions or associations, and to facilitate the settlement of industrial disputes by conciliation and arbitration." This in turn has promoted the formation of employers' unions, and so the responsible employers and "registered" organizations on both sides are provided for carrying the dispute to the court of settlement.

Together with the court of arbitration, "Boards of Conciliation" are established in each of the six "industrial districts" of the colony. These boards consist of five members, two chosen from the registered unions of workmen, two from the employers' union, while these four choose a fifth as their chairman.

If all the parties to the dispute accept the ruling of this Board of Conciliation the matter is settled for three years, and the case goes no further. If, however, as is usually the case, the award is not satisfactory to one or the other of the parties concerned, the matter is carried to the Court of Arbitration, which sits in different districts as occasion requires. This court consists of three members, one nominated by the employers' union, one by the workmen's union, and the third, who is the president, is appointed by the former in council. The award of this court is absolutely final, and there is no appeal. Series of labor disputes every year are settled by this court, and on the whole, the consensus of opinion approves most heartily of the scheme.

Boards of Conciliation.

The Boards of Conciliation, however, which it was hoped at the beginning would settle nine-tenths of the disputes, have not fulfilled public expectations, for their awards are not considered final, and four-fifths of the cases are carried on to the Board of Arbitration.

In the early days of the law the employers were slow to take advantage of it, both actively and passively, and all the early cases were brought before the court on the initiative of the labor unions; but when the employers found that the law had come, they began to regard it more favorably, and decided to test it fairly.

"As experience of the working of the Act increases," writes a well-known authority, "unionists will probably become less, employers more eager to invoke its aid. Public opinion in the colony is quite prepared to give the experiment a fair trial; the employers and employed alike will readily put up with incidental difficulties, and even hardships, in the operation of the Act rather than resort to labor disputes to the argument of the brick-bat."

Public Trust Office.

Though there may be some lingering opposition yet to compulsory arbitration and other labor laws, there is one peculiarly New Zealand institution which is unusually popular, and that is the Public Trust Office.

The Public Trust Office administers estates whenever requested to do so by the testators or when their owner dies intestate, and "the public trustee" may be named substitute for any trustee of property in the colony who are unable or unwilling to perform their duties.

The advantages of the public trustee are obvious in the expedition and economy with which estates are administered. He is paid his salary and not a commission on the value of the estate, and it is not to his advantage to prolong the settlement and engage in unending litigation.

"The Public Trustee," we are told,

"Never dies, never leaves the colony, never becomes insolvent." The fidelity of his administration is secured by statute; the colony guarantees capital monies against loss by bad investments, and secures to the beneficiary the payment of a common rate of interest."

State Life Insurance.

State Life Insurance is another deservedly popular institution of New Zealand. Started more than thirty years ago with the design of promoting thrift among the poorer classes, it has fully justified its design, with the result that to-day the people of New Zealand carry more life insurance than any people in the world, the average being nearly £80 for every adult man. Of this sum the State Office guarantees one-half, and has undoubtedly greatly promoted faith in this method of providing for the future. A State Life Insurance Office has also recently been started.

The Government, too, not only insures its people against death and disaster, but it takes charge of their savings for them; for, with very few exceptions, all the savings banks are connected with the postoffice, and in these banks more than £6,000,000, credited for the most part to those in very moderate circumstances.

This summary of some of the most striking economic conditions of the most interesting colony plainly shows that it is a people very much governed. This paternal Government, however, is not imposed by anyone from without, but is the choice of the people themselves, and may be thrown off at any time when it suits their interests.

Paternal Government.

The Government takes charge of them as soon as they are born. It prescribes what they shall study in the public schools, how little they shall work in the factories, how much they shall be paid, what holidays they shall have. It undertakes to settle all disputes between the workman and his employer, and sees to it that the former gets his pay in good current coin of the realm. After he gets his pay it helps him to save it, and, if he is not able to save enough, pensions him in his old age, provided he has been a half-way decent fellow. After he dies it takes care of his estate for him and administers it with neatness and despatch.

"Governed to death!" "Legislated into the grave!" I hear some of my readers exclaim. But after all this, like every other, is known only by its fruits, and it must be said its fruits are not bad.

This very paternal Government, it must be remembered, is the deliberate choice of the people themselves, and they ought to know what they want. It may induce them too often to visit the public schools, but it does not deprive them of self-respect, even if in some degree diminishes personal initiative and self-reliance.

But what are the results of this paternalistic socialism? Here are some of them. A land without paupers and without millions of men, who have private wealth that gives to each individual on the average more than £240, ranking him very high among the inhabitants of the most favored nations in the world in this respect; a country where every individual spends more for food, drink and clothes than in any other country in the world, in spite of the comparative cheapness of staple articles; a country of industrious, prosperous, contented, law-abiding, God-fearing people. These indisputable facts surely speak well for the industrial conditions in the world's economic experiment station—New Zealand.
