POLITICAL PASSION.

To What it is Sure to Lead. (From an American Politician.)

"Liberty in some countries is a kind of charade word, an anagram, a symbol representing an imaginary quantity, a password invented by unhappy men to express all that they do not possess; a term meaning in the minds of slaves a conglomerate of conditions so absurd, of aspirations so futile, of imaginary delights so fantastically unreasonable, that if the ideal state of which the chained dreamers rave were realized but for one moment, humanity would start in amazement at the first glimpse of so much monstrosity, and by and by would hold its sides with laughter at the folly of its deluded fellows. In most countries where liberty is talked of it is but a dream and such a dream as could only occur to the sickened fancy of a generation of bondsmen. But it means something else with us. It is here, in this country, in this capital, in this hall, it is in the air we breathe, in the light we see, in the strong, force pulses of our blood; it is the heritage of men whose sires died for it, whose fathers laid down all they had for it, of men whose own veins have bled for it—and not in vain. In these United States liberty is a fact.

"We must decide quickly, then, between the condition of our liberty and the requirements of frantic political passion. We must decide between peace and war, for that is where the issue will come in the end. Between freedom, prosperity and peace on the one side, and civil war on the other; an alternative so horrible and inhuman and hideous that the very mention of it makes brave men shiver in disgust at the memory of the word recalled. Do you think we are much farther from it now than we were in 1860? Do you think we were far from it in 1878? It is a short step from the threat to the deed, when political passion is already turning to bitter personal hate."

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 7, 1884.—The latest sensation in connection with the Greely survivors in the ordering of Connell, one of the party, to Fort Warren, Boston harbor. It will be remembered that Connell was the weakest of the party at the time of the rescue; indeed, it was only a question of a few hours as to his death. Of his condition Commander Schley says in his report: "The latter was cold to the waist; all sensation of hunger gone; was speechless and almost breathless; his eyes were fixed and glassy." To-day he remains the weakest of the party, and the order sending him to Fort Warren, while all the rest are to remain here for a while, and then proceed to Washington, is causing a vast deal of talk as to the why and wherefore. Connell, at the time of volunteering for the expedition, was company quartermaster sergeant of troop B, 3d cavalry, a position which is always given to the best soldier in the company, and one that is considered the best in a cavalry company. This position he gave up to go north, and was one of the best and most active members of the brave band. Why, then, should he be ordered to Fort Warren? is one of the questions that is agitating this community. Members of the party, when interviewed, refused to say much about it, but all agree that there must be a nigger in the wood pile." While it is quite easy to guess from what they say, the precise location of the dusky individual, not one will admit that they actually know the reason of the order. Lieut. Greely, however, is openly charged here with having instigated the order, although it is understood that he denies all knowledge of how it came about. Said a resident of Portsmouth to the writer recently: "Don't you know what is the matter? You know something of the inside workings of the expedition?" "Why, it is beautifully written, and his description of the camp at Garlington island is particularly accurate, as I chance to know from men who were present from the relief expedition; but you will notice that in this report he pays off some of Greely's fine speeches as to his intelligence, etc., etc., thus squaring the record of the Arctic mutual admiration society. One of his statements is absolutely untrue, and this being so, we can reasonably argue that many other misstatements are contained in his report."

"Which statement is it that you object to?" "That where he described the finding of Lieut. Greely. He says, and his imagination would do credit to the writer of a sensational novel: "Lieut. Greely was found in his sleeping bag, his body inclined forward, and head resting upon his left hand. The Book of Common Prayer was open, and held in his right hand. He appeared to be reading prayers to Private Connell, whose condition was most desperate and critical."

"This tender scene of a helpless, almost famished officer consoling a dying companion was in itself one that brought tears to the eyes of the strongest and stoutest of those who stood about them on the merciful errand of relief. Now I know that is not so; indeed, just what Greely was doing when Schley entered the tent was a bit more practical, if not so pathetic. Instead of reading prayers to Connell, which would have been impossible under the circumstances, as the good book could not have been readily found, he was trying to gather to himself a can of pemmican, and Sergt. Brinard was endeavoring to keep him from getting it, and finally succeeded in doing so by promising that he (Greely) should have a piece."

"But Schley says in his report that Greely was physically the weakest, but mentally the strongest; how do you account for that?"

"Well, just here Schley shows his inaccuracy. If Greely was physically the weakest, Connell should certainly have been dead, and poor Ellison the same. The truth of the matter is, he had done no work, and while the others were building the second camp, and cutting ice (3 feet thick) to get water, Greely was in his sleeping bag husbanding his strength. He had told the boys that the weakest must give way to the strongest, and he was in training to make one of the latter party."

"One of the survivors said to the writer: "If Greely had followed out his instructions to examine the English cache at Cape Sabine, and also a supposed cache at Cape Prospect, on his way north, we should have been all right anywhere, for he could have left enough provisions at both these places to have sustained us on the retreat, which was to be ordered if help did not arrive at Lady Franklin bay. As it was, he sailed directly past the two points, trusting to luck that the caches were all right. Then the retreat was commenced at the wrong time of the year, and every one of the party was dubious as to its result; indeed, Lieut. Kialingburg asked to be permitted to remain at Fort Conger, where fish food in plenty was always to be obtained."

Steamships to France.

A movement is on foot to re-establish on a firm basis the Halifax Steam Navigation Company, which has been inactive for some time. The new provisional directors are John F. Stairs, M. P., Mayor Mackintosh, William Roche, E. P. Archbold, Wm. Gossip, John White and Joseph Wood. The original enterprise had to be given up because the company found it would not pay without calling at Boston, and the Dominion Government notified them of the withdrawal of its $1,500 per voyage subsidy as being voted for traffic confined to Canadian ports.

The Furness line offered to accept a subsidy involving calling at St. John, besides Halifax, and the Halifax company withdrew. Since then the company has got an act of Dominion incorporation, and a promise from the Government of a subsidy of $50,000 per annum, equal to $2,000 per voyage for a line to Havre, to run fortnightly in summer from the St. Lawrence and Halifax alternately, and from Halifax in the winter, with liberty of calling at the United States ports, the subsidy being guaranteed for five years from the 1st of April, 1885. The conditions require at least two steamers of 2,000 tons capacity and a contract has been made on favorable terms with Alexander Stephen & Sons, the Clyde ship builders, for the construction of two first-class steamers, of a speed of 11 knots, with all the latest improvements. Already, it is stated, $100,000 of the company's $200,000 capital has been subscribed and the balance is offered to the public.

The crown of England is believed to be the finest piece of regalia in the world. The lower part of the band is a row of 29 pearls, the upper part of 113; between them, in front, is a large sapphire; behind is a smaller sapphire, with six others and eight emeralds. Between the two great sapphires are ornaments containing 286 diamonds. Above the band are eight sapphires, surrounded by eight diamonds and eight festoons, containing 160 diamonds. In the front of the crown is the Ruby given to the Black Prince by Pedro, King of Castile. This is set in a Maltese cross and forming the cross are seventy-five large diamonds. Three other crosses are around the upper part of the crown, containing altogether 386 diamonds. Between the four crosses are four ornaments with four rubies in their centres, and containing respectively eighty-four, eighty-six, eighty-five, and eighty-seven diamonds. From the Maltese crosses rise four arches composed of oak-leaves and acorns, the leaves containing 728 diamonds. The thirty-two acorns are each of a single pearl, and are set in cups made of fifty-four diamonds. Above the arches stands the mound, containing 548 diamonds, and above the mound is the cross, containing a very large sapphire, four very large, and 408 smaller diamonds. The value of the whole is variously estimated, but is commonly believed to be about $1,500,000.

Peers and People.

It would not surprise me were we to see somewhat rough times when the Lords throw out the Franchise Bill for the second time. The people are still in good humor, because they cannot bring themselves to believe that twenty or thirty hereditary nonentities, whose very names are unknown to them, can possibly have the assurance to pit themselves against Mr. Gladstone with the country at his
