e of the Reasons for Using Either Hand in any Kind of Work.

Every body who writes ought to learn how to do it. Take the lawyers, copy-ists, stenographers, clerks, every one who the pen; in a short time they get. The hand is tired, the body is tired, the neck is cramped. What a relief it would be if they could change ns and write with the other hand. But I have seen a picture of a reporter taking notes with one hand and writing them with the other.

That looks like a mere joke, yet it is common thing to write with ooth hands at once. The type writers do it every day. That is the reason why a person working a type writer can write faster than a person using a pen. Now it is no more difficult to use a pen with the left hand than it is to strike the keys of a type writer with the left hand. mesely a matter of practice. Some left-handed people cannot use the right hand for writing. But it is a common thing for persons who have lost the hand aced to writing to learn to write with the other. During the late war many soldiers who lost the right hand learned to write with the other. In playing the piano an expert performer must use both hands with equal dexterity. There is no reason why a girl who learns to sew should not be taught to sew with both hands. If that were one the fatigue of sewing would be eatly relieved, because the body could be frequently rested by change of posi-

The Coman Catholic Temperance Worker

The leader of English Catholicism, Henry Edward Manning, is not alone eminent in his churchly relations, but as a leader in social reform. Although his appearance suggests the medieval saint, he is a vigorous worker in sympathy with the energies of nineteenth-century activities. In association with eminent men representing diverse denomination, or no representing diverse denomination, or no religious bodies at all, his pen and his voice give aid and encouragement to the philanthropic and educational movements which characterize the age. He frequently appears on the temperance plat-form, and the value of his advocacy of its principles, especially among the poor Catholics of London, is incalculable. All measures looking to social advancement, outside of those which directly compete (if the phrase is admissble) with the operations of his church, find in him sympathy, and, so far as he can give it, hearty support. His speeches are clear and chaste in style, simple and impressive, sympathetic, and, at the same time, dig-nified. They invariably command the influence proper to the utterances of the refined scholar, the philanthropist and the Christian. Very many Protestant temperance workers are too prone to forget the great work now being done for temperance by Roman Catholic workers and societies

Song Worship. -For Sunday schools By L. O. Emerson and W. F. Sherwin. Published by Oliver Ditson & Co., Bos ton. Price, 35 cents.

The authors of this little work should if any two people do know, what is needed, and should be able to manufacture the right article. Mr. Sherwin, who has had charge of the music at Chautauqua and other preminent assemblages of reli-gious and educational people, is in just the position to feel the pulse of the Sun-day-school public. If he says a higher style of Sunday-school music is needed, it is very likely to be so. Of Mr. Emerne taste and ability there can be no question.

Song Worship has 192 pages, of which three are devoted to the large index, and another page to a convenient 'Index of Subjects.' The nearly 300 Songs and Hymns ought to satisfy most people with store. their plenty and variety.

In view of the gravity of this charge against a vice which curses earth and displeases heaven, it is the duty of young men to have nothing to do with it, and the more they recognize their individual responsibility, the more intense will be their hatred of a system which has, in the past, so terribly thinned their ranks. Every young man who countenances or encourages the use of stimulants, who boasts that he can drink when he pleases, and abstain when he likes, who laughs when friends remonstrate and who sneers at young men when they adopt total abstinence princi-ples, is retarding the arrival of that day when this great evil which oppresses humanity will be swept away, and for the evil which his example caused he will be held accountable. This thought is appaling, but neither logic nor sophistry can overthrow its stern and solemn trust. How many men who, in the first flush of young manhood, contracted drinking habits, and who were plucked as 'brands from the burning,' would pass along the paths of life with lighter steps and happier hearts if the influence of that earlier life could be removed, but their new life cannot destroy the effects of their old one, and upon the walls of their memories are traced the scenes of hours misused, of talents misapplied and influence misdirected.
