The Future Eye.

By RUTH CAMERON.

To every one of the hundred persons who can appreciate the thing that is there is perhaps one who can appreciate the thing that might be.

Some friends of mine who were visiting at a summer resort to which I have been for many years were greatly attracted by a certain house. It is a dear little white cottage with a sloping roof and a big white chimney in the centre, the type known as Cape Cod Colonial. It is freshly painted; dainty muslin curtains flutter at the windows; there is a wonderful, old-fashioned garden gay with Sweet William and larkspur at one side, and a row of hollyhocks in front of the house. My friend never fails to exclaim with admiration when she passes that house and to say that she wishes she might have one like it.

Now one day we passed a shabby red cottage with a dilapidated looking annex of some sort propped up against it in the manner which gave us the word "lean-to." The place was for sale. A native who was with us pointed it out to my enthusiastic friend. "There's a good cottage for you," he said. She thought he was humorously inclined. "Not at all," he protested. "That's just the way the cottage you're so crazy about looked before the folks who have got it now took it. They painted it white, pulled down the lean-to and planted a few flowers, and now everybody stops to admire it."

"We all thought that woman was crazy when she bought it, but I guess she knew what she was about all right. She had an offer of a thousand more than she paid for it the other day."

Of course she knew what she was about. She was the one person in a hundred who could see and appreciate not only the thing that was but the thing that might be. She had the Future Eye.

Before Fulton's steamboat made its first trip, it was impossible for him to get the capital he needed for his venture. When Stephenson's steam engine was about to be tried out, one of the scoffers offered to "cast a wheel" if it ever attained a speed of ten miles an hour. It eventually made thirty miles.

Twenty years ago people who paid good prices for farms and undeveloped land some miles from the center of New York City were laughing at to-day apartment blocks are starting up on these farms and the men who own them are millionaires. When Mr. Ford started putting down the price of automobiles everyone thought that he was crazy and he was pointed to save what money he had already made. No one thinks he is crazy now.

All these people saw what might be, while the detractors could not see an inch beyond what was.

Yes I know there are plenty of people who see what might be and see it wrongly. But that does not justify the people who never see or try to see anything but what is. The great things of the world are for those who have the future eye, who seem what might be and see it truly.

Bavarian Prince in Boasting Mood

London, Oct. 29.—A despatch to Reuters' Telegram Company from Amsterdam says:

"Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria brother of the Belgian Queen, who is commanding the Sixth German Army Corps, has issued the following army order:—

"Soldiers of the Sixth Army Corps, We are fortunate to have opposed to us British troops—the troops of that people whose envy has been at work for years to surround us with enemies in order to strangle us. We owe to them the present bloody war. Therefore, take reprisals for the cunning of the enemy and for all our sacrifices when we now meet them. Show them that it is not so easy to wipe out the Germans of history now that we are face to face with an enemy who is the greatest obstacle to peace."

If Catarrh has Spoiled Your Hearing Get Cured To-Day by "Catarrhozone"

Don't Stay Deaf Any Longer—Follow the Prescription—Use Catarrhozone

Nine cases in ten of hard hearing are curable. By curable we don't mean relieves—we mean that the sense of hearing can be permanently brought back. Catarrh usually causes that deafness.

Cure the catarrhal condition and you remove the cause of your poor hearing.

If you were sure you had catarrhal deafness you would use a real cure at once—of course you would. There is a cure for you—one that is inexpensive—pleasant to use—and sure to do its work thoroughly.

Catarrhozone is no experiment for deafness.

Thousands before you have cleared Catarrh out of their heads by the aid of Catarrhozone and have thereby been cured of deafness.

No batteries or miniature telephones to bother you—no internal medicine to take—you have simply to follow special directions for the Catarrhozone Inhaler. Do this and you'll find a wonderful improvement in short order.

Any druggist can supply you Catarrhozone, or you can for $1 secure it post paid under plain wrapper from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Sulphate of Ammonia.

St. John's Gas Light Company.

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent. of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manures.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Yours truly,

D. JAMES DAVIES, B.Sc., F.C.S.,
Analyst and Assayer.

Determination to Get Calais is Uppermost.

New York, Oct. 29.—The military expert of the New York Times this morning says:

"The energy with which the Germans are pressing their attacks along the Yser River in the westernmost corner of Belgium shows that it is not a demonstration but a determination to obtain some military object."

The accounts of the fighting indicate that the Germans pushed forward their night attacks without delay to gain superiority in artillery fire. The cost in killed and wounded of these assaults against entrenched positions must have been terrible. This great effort of the Germans to break through the Belgian defensive line seems to have been stopped for the time being, due to the arrival of French reinforcements.

Both sides claim the advantage in the fighting east of Ypres and between Lille and Arras. No definite progress, however, is given in the despatches of either side.

In the fighting the forces of the Allies seem to have become intermingled to a large extent. British and Belgians retreated along the coast. French and Belgians are fighting at Dixmude. French and Hindus are fighting east of Ypres. The British have been mentioned at Armentieres, the French at Lille, the French at Lens, and the British again at Arras. From this point south to the Aisne the line is held by the French alone. For forty miles, opposite Soissons and Craonne, the first British army holds the line. The original troops have been augmented and to a large extent replaced by the stream of reinforcements that has been forwarded to this part of the line. From Craonne to Switzerland the French again hold back the German armies.

Co-operation Difficulties.

The plea of the British commander in the Belgian field of operations for a supply of interpreters calls attention to the serious difficulty that any allied force must have in co-ordinating its operations. Not only are the languages different, causing misunderstanding among subordinates, but the whole system of control of operations differs among the three nations.

There is every evidence that the fighting will be kept up throughout the winter with unabated fury. The German troops that started for the front in the last week of September were already going out completely equipped with fur gloves and sheep-skin coats.

They evidently intend not let up in their campaign and the Allies must needs follow suit.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hazzard Fuesle

Journey's End

And so, holding in her hand the letter from Mrs. Challoner to her husband, Marian Winthrop's final objection to marrying this man had been swept aside like a leaf that falters in the path of an autumnal gust.

Things had shaped themselves for her, and she had found each other. The absence of certain qualities in the woman he had married had given him eyes to see these things in Marian. And Marian's marriage to Frank, disastrous as it had been, had, through its very woes, yielded her the equipment to sense the subtle qualities in Challoner which had drawn them together.

Marriage and divorce had prepared each for this new impending marriage. Gazing at her companion across the softly lighted table, Marian Winthrop knew that by no other way than the hard path of divorced life, sharp and rugged under foot and full of grievous hurts, could she have found, and known when she found, this man whose wife she had made up her mind to become.

And so, reviewing the hurrying events of the recent past in a flash of swift retrospection, she had no regrets for what had befallen her. She was content to forget the past and to wait the morning of a new and brighter day.

THE END.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

Wipe spots from gilt frames with a sponge wet in alcohol. Save all bits of meat, put them in a jar the refrigerator, and from these bits you can make croquettes.
