A SETTER FROM A CAT. Dear Editor:

Dear Editor:

I hereby take

My pen in paw to say,
Can you explain a curious thing
I found the other day?
There is another little cat
Who sits behind a frame,
And looks so very much like me
You'd think we were the same.
I try to make her play with me,
Yet when I mew and call
Though I see her mew in answet,
She makes no sound at all
And to the dullest kitten
It's plain enough to see

It's plain enough to see That either I am mocking her, Or she is mocking me, It makes no difference what I play, It makes no difference was.
She seems to know the game,
For every time I look around
I see her do the same.
And yet no matter though I creep

And yet no matter though I creep On tiptoe lest she hear. Or quickly dash around the frame, She's sure to disappear!

DAISY'S FUN.

It seems as if there is so many things to do a person doesn't have time to go a place or do a mortil thing. There's so much fun, maybe I'll not have time to have it all before I stop being a little girl. You stop at 8, you kaow, and then begin being a big girl. I'm afraid I'll cry that day, but then, maybe big girls 'joy theirselves, too!

Then sometimes I play I'm che dancing-legged lady, with my legs going right down into the ends of my toes, but they don't, very good. Where do dancing-legged ladies live? I never saw one on the street, and I've looked and looked. I asked Uncle John if they were angels, and he said no, they only played angels. And the clownd, too, never saw him on the street. I suppose he's so white he's 'fraid he'll get soiled if he comes out. I don't see how he can ever enjoy himself.

Bays' most fun is when they go skating and freeze their ears and have to have snow rubbed into them to keep them from spoiling.

Once a boy who used to run away forme school and go fishing caught so many fish he broke his arm carrying them home, and his ma gave him 10 cents a pound for 'em. Then when he got bigger he could paint picksures of fishes so good they were smelly, and now he is an arterist, and has an artery of his own, and makes fish to sell for an awful lot of money. As soon as I have time, said Miss Daisy, seating herself in her little red chair, a very much soiled dolly in hand, I'm going to tell every person I know how to enjoy theirselves.

It's as easy. You must only have fun. That's all.

To have fun you got to have earrings and things, and if you haven't got'em, make 'em!

I do. I have nine essquisite earrings that I made myself outen of beads and things, and I'm going to make some more soon.
