AUTUMN.

We recently published in the Illustrated News engravings of "Spring" and "Summer," copied from pictures exhibited by celebrated painters in London. To-day we give the third picture of the series, entitled Autumn. This, however, is from an original drawing by Mr. G. A. Binkert, an artist of high abilities, connected with the Illustrated News.

Spring has at all times been the favorite theme with pastoral writers—the bud of promise, the tender leaflet, the balmy joyous breath, full of hope—all seem to attract our warmest eulogies. But then

"There comes a time when laughing Spring
And joyous Summer cease to be."

And it is the Autumn time that ensues which we consider the true season of joy. If the Spring was full of hope and promise, the Autumn is full of fulfillment. If the Spring was odorous with the balmy breath of flowers, the Autumn is rich with golden grain and clustering wealth of vine. Oh! let us be thankful for the crowning of our hopes in the Autumn of the year; and even if the silent failing of the deaf touch our hearts with sadness, let us not forget that the same power which sent the pale and blighted famine-shivering to the ground, fills our stores houses in anticipation of the coming sterile reign of Winter. "Nay to

Who doeth all things well."

HOW PRINCE GORTZ CHAKOFF DEFEATED THE
FIRST ATTACK ON THE MALAKOFF.—A curious court martial is now sitting at Lyons on a private of the 100th regiment of the line. Capt.
the prisoner, represented himself at the headquarters of his regiment a short time since, and stated that during the siege of Sebastopol he was taken prisoner by the Cossacks while fighting in the Tcherniahd had been described in Russia ever since. However, the details of which recorded an awkward story of treason in face of the enemy, a very rare thing in the ranks of the French army, and so Mr. Capt. got off his trial, and we could see it came out that he deserted on the 13th of June, 1855; was taken before Prince Gortz hauled him before the strength and condition of the French army, and what seems almost incredible in a cavalry private, probably of the intended attack on the Malakoff, which was planned for the next day but over-set that the Russian General was enabled to make such preparations that as may be comprehended Marshal MacMahon was surprised and the attack failed. The main evidence was that the general is derived from a Russian memorandum handed to me by and in the possession of one of the staff of General Lefebvre, who comandered the cavalry and is now in Mexico, which indicates the source of the French deserter's information.

"The fort is assailed with great energy by the Russians, and should be moved, we shall probably have an earlier termination of the war than in 1855.

Massachusetts. She had long been in delicate
