To the southward, at the bend of the line, the Germans continue to make furious but unavailing attempts to break the French line. In the east, along the Meuse, the Germans have, according to the French account, essayed in vain to repulse the French troops who debouched along the territory in which the Camp des Romaines now in the hands of the Germans, is situated, in an attempt to cut out that portion of the German army which is thrust towards St. Mihiel. Generally speaking, the French claim to have made some detailed progress on various points of the front. A Supreme Struggle. Both sides are bringing up reinforce-

Out of the mass of conflicting messages stands the fact that the Germans in Belgium are attempting two major operations, first, to cut thru the Belgians between Nieuport and Dixmunde, and second, to throw back the Franco-British army around Arras. All of their skill and the full weight of their powerful army has been directed to this end, but without any result whatsoever.

With rain falling in sheets the flat coastlands along the channel are extremely unfavorable for the movement of troops and almost impassable where heavy artillery is concerned. This has prevented the Germans bringing their big guns into play, altho reliable reports tell of a great movement of reinforcements of men and cannon from Amsterdam and other points. Indications of sanguinary character of the fighting in Belgium are contained in a despatch from the Flushing correspondent of The Evening News, who wired on Monday as follows:

"On Sunday seventeen trains of forty cars each brought German wounded back to Bruges.

"The northern columns of the Germans have been increased with reinforcements brought at night by train from Bruges, where there are now but few Germans left."

HEAVY FIGHTING AT LILLE

The statement made yesterday that Lille had been retaken by the allies proves premature. The town is invested on three sides and advantage in the fight for its possession rests plainly with the Germans. They have erected strong fortifications and have some of their best regiments in the trenches around the town. The kaiser is said to place much importance on holding the city and there can be no question that the conflict at this point will be stubborn and long drawn out.

In distinction to the success of the Germans at Lille is the progress made by their foes to the west of that point. Here the allied troops have driven the Germans backward and Lille now stands well forward in territory held by French and British forces. This is also true of St. Mihiel, held by the crown prince, now the most southerly position of the Germans. It is regarded as one of the most surprising developments of the war that Frederick Wil-liam has been able to maintain himself at St. Mihiel, with the French winning on both sides of the town. Altho his stubborn resistance reveals a resolute spirit that commands the highest respect, it is agreed by all military authorities that he is none the less in a very serious predicament and is risking capture or destruction of a good them silenced the German battery. part of his army by holding on to a position that is almost hopeless. The day was marked by French concentration on the right bank of the Meuse, further endangering the haughty German heir. Despite a desperate counter attack delivered by his forces in the vicinity of Camp des Romains, the French gained considerable ground around that town. Etain continues to be the objective of a fierce French attack and its fall would mean a complete severance of the crown prince's communications with Metz.

On the centre the situation remains in statu quo, both the French and German lines having been weakened until artillery play is practically the only activity.

KAISER IS ALARMED.

North of Bagny, on the road to Metz, the Germans today combated the French most savagely. The hand of the kaiser is seen in the increased resistance in this vicinity. He has evidently taken alarm at the close approach of the republic's army to that strong fortress. Yesterday it was asserted that German trenches, only nine miles from Metz, had been assaulted.

A casualty list of non-commissioned officers under date of Sept. 17, just issued, reports 95 wounded and 900 missing, of whom over 600 belonged to the Royal Munster Fusiliers.

Another casualty list dated Oct. 16 and Oct. 18 reports five officers killed and 12 wounded.

The strength of the German posi-tions north of Rcye which facilitated their movements toward Lille, is ex-plained by the fact that they were occupying an unfinished canal extend-ing as far as Roisel.
