merging a gentleman and his "too well meaning but misguided accomplices" in boiling oil or molten lead.

Only the oriental could have conceived the idea of assassinating our gallant minister of militia with a Ross rifle.

General Hughes has been much more closely identified in the public mind with that rifle than has Sir Charles Ross himself. He stood by it against his party until 1911, and finally imposed it upon his associates when they came into power.

The major-general is a brave man, but would no doubt rather die like a soldier in battle than be shot down in the midst of a speech. But if the latter misfortune had befallen him at London, Ont., and a Ross rifle had dealt the blow, one could not but recall the famous lines:

"Twas thine own genius gave the fatal blow
And helped to plant the wound that laid thee low.
So the struck eagle, stretched upon the plain,
No more thru rolling clouds to soar again.
Viewed his own feather on the fatal dart,
And wing'd the shaft that quiver'd in his heart;
He nursed the pinion which impell'd the steel;
While the same plumage that had warmed his nest
Drank the last life drop of his bleeding breast."

From the City Hall to Berlin

With all the criticism that has been leveled at the city hall administration this year, even its enemies have been unable to find any fault with the direction and disposition of the city's finances. It is in the mind of everyone who has considered the matter, but it is likely to slip out of the minds of the voters in general, that when the present mayor came into office two years ago there was an undigested mass of bonds in the city treasury, and a state of affairs which threatened the city with the supervision of a sheriff's officer. One week it was touch-and-go whether the city pay roll would be met.

Nearly thirty millions of money have been handled since then, and under the circumstances, at highly favorable rates. One or two unfavorable results have been achieved, but the city has got the best of the money market. The details of this have been gone into over and over again and form an interesting page in the city's history.

Mayor Hocken and Controller McCarthy have had the onus of this work, and it is only fair that they receive their due measure of the credit. Had the situation not been cleared up, had it not been effectively dealt with, had it not been so completely in hand at the outbreak of the war, Toronto would have been in a condition not only of embarrassment, but of actual distress.

As it is, under the arrangements which Controller McCarthy was to a large extent responsible for, the business of the city has been carried on without a hitch, and with the slightest possible curtailment that could have been expected. Without this straightening out of the city's financial tangles there would have been a suspension of most of the public works in the program of the engineer's department, there would have been closing down of some of the important departments completely for lack of funds, and the wages and salaries of city employees would inevitably have had to be reduced or held up. This would have meant an almost inconceivable amount of distress in the city, besides striking a heavy blow at the city's credit.

As it is, all this has been avoided, the ordinary business of the city has been in no way interfered with, many large works have been carried on without interruption, and all other large and important works, such as the Bloor street viaduct, the funds for which had been voted, will be proceeded with just as the war had not occurred. Naturally there had to be some retrenchment for the future, and with respect to future undertakings, but the postponement is of the nature of a war measure, and not forced on by anything in the condition of the city itself.

Large votes for the purposes of patriotic measures and home defence have been taken into account, and when the financial state of the city comes to be summed up for pre-election purposes, it will be found that Toronto has never been in so satisfactory a condition before.

This is a cause of strength, not only to the city, but to the province and the country, and it is one of the ways in which solid help is rendered to the empire in a critical time. To carry on business as usual is the best way to carry the war into Germany. Mayor Hocken and Controller McCarthy have thus done their share in opening the road to Berlin.

What Might Have Been

There seems to be in the oriental mind a capacity for sardonic pleasure in the sight of suffering which differs from what we generally call cruelty. The occidental is cruel brutally, furiously and without any of that intellectual pleasure. When the French executed Dr. Guillotine with his own machine they did not think of what the Turks might have done with malice aforethought. The latter, like the minkido, would see something humorous as well as lingering in im-

Delaying "Votes for Women"

President Harriet Dunlop Prenter of the Political Equality League has taken one way of showing why "votes for women" is not so successful a cause as many think it ought to be. Sir James Whitney continually kept repeating that when women wanted the vote they would get it. He could see no unanimity among those who did want it. So he refused to give votes to women, feeling sure, like an astute politician, that his opponents would eat each other up.

The Canadian Suffrage Associations have suffered from the same evil that other political organizations have suffered from, and if envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness are too strong terms to describe the sentiments that sometimes appear to exist, it is in that direction, evidently, rather than in the direction of good feeling, love, kindness and charity that critics must look for active demonstrations among the suffragists.

It is understood that the chief reason for the organization of the Political Equality League was on account of the alleged inactivity of the senior suffrage organization. Now, when this body shows some vitality and secures the presence of Miss Christabel Pankhurst in Toronto, it seems rather inconsistent to attack that lady, who is one of the best known suffragists in the world.

The mere men of the existing political institutions may be pardoned for finding in Mrs. Prenter's attack a reason for still further postponing "votes for women." It is to be deplored that such an excellent cause suffers most from its own advocates.

British and German Ideas

This war is fundamentally a conflict between two ideas that are striving to dominate the world. That does not mean that it is a struggle to settle which type of civilization is going to prevail. For in that case it would be a combat between two world powers, one seeking to retain supremacy and the other to replace it. While there would be no such rallying to the support of the allies on the part of the weaker nationalities as this war has already provoked. One or two have been held back because they fear and dread the possibility of German victory, and are providing for that possibility. But in their heart of hearts every liberty-loving people is praying that success may attend the allied arms.

That instinctive idea is a compelling tribute to the British Empire as it exists in the twentieth century. In earlier days it grew thru conquest, just as Prussia did. But the Briton abroad, just as the Briton at home, carried over within himself the principle of free self-government. He fought for it and died for it, and thru his individual devotion independent states have arisen, outside and inside the empire, but each carrying on the old British tradition. Prussian militarists want to impose their notions on the world, and think they can do it thru the might of the sword. The British statesmen have learned that freedom is the root of loyalty. Had the British Empire rested on compulsion it would not be the unit it is today. Assistance spontaneously given, even from native races supposed to be peculiarly open to incentives to rebellion, is a magnificent tribute to the work done by the civil servants of the motherland.

Germany in the Ditch

One wonders what the German people will do when their eyes are opened to the true story of this war. To them, apparently, a far more rigid censorship is being exercised than that which afflicts the British public. They have been fed up on tales of German victories, and led to believe that the German armies are not only hammering at the gates of Paris, but are practically occupying the whole of France. As for the campaigns in Russia, the story is the same. Russians in thousands are being captured. Austria even has her reports of continued success, and the turning back of the tide of Russian invasion. The people believe these statements because they believe that German arms are invincible. Preparation made them so, and preparation ensures victory.

COLOMBIA IS NOT TOOL OF GERMANY

Minister Declares Every Effort Used to Maintain Neutrality.

Canadian Press Despatch.
NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Colombia has maintained the strictest neutrality ever since the outbreak of the European war and has made every effort to compel all foreigners to maintain its neutrality. Don Julio Betancourt, Colombian minister to the United States, declared today. He made this declaration in an official statement given out at his hotel here, which read:

"Mr. Betancourt, the Colombian minister, said today that the government of Colombia has maintained the strictest neutrality and has made every effort to compel all foreigners to maintain its neutrality. He said if either the English or French governments have proved violations of the neutrality, he would most cordially punish them. He pointed out that the government of Colombia was now under government censorship, in the same manner as wireless stations in the United States. He said that despite the active efforts of the Colombian Government to maintain its neutrality at all costs, one of the belligerents had succeeded in erecting temporary wireless stations along the coast of Colombia, and he said he would most cordially punish them. He said that such things can happen and are harder to detect, on the densely populated shores of South America, than in Maine."

GERMANS ENTICED INTO RUSSIAN TRAP

Repulse of Force From Wielun Made Crushing Defeat Certain.

Canadian Press Despatch.
PETERSBURG, Nov. 26.—Semi-official advice received from Poland show that the German defeat at Lodz, culminating in the capture of a German army corps, was the result of a Russian manoeuvre by which the Germans were led into an inextricable trap.

The Russian left wing, resting on the River Wartha and the Russian right wing on the Vistula, both lying along the Warsaw-Kalis Railroad, moved forward in unison in the last two days.

Simultaneously the Russian centre apparently repulsed a German column from Wielun to repulse the Russian left wing and to form a junction with the Russian forces.

The German plan failed as a result of the battle on Nov. 25, when the German force from Wielun was repulsed. Thereafter the Russian wings advanced and closed the gap thru which the German centre had passed. In the meantime the Russian reserves had come up and they surrounded the Germans, thousands of whom surrendered. Others fought their way north in an effort to join the German left in the vicinity of Lodz, a town forty-four miles southwest of Warsaw.

VICTORIA CROSS FOR AN INTREPID INDIAN

He Took German Officer's Sword and Killed Ten Men.

Canadian Press Despatch.
LONDON, Nov. 26.—A Times Boulevard des Capes correspondent says: Havildar Ganna Sing, of the 57th Rifles, is the first Indian to be recommended for the Victoria Cross. He has arrived aboard a hospital ship, bundle of splints and bandages, but very cheerful and full of heart. He has five bullet wounds. Havildar, with fifteen men of his regiment, was attacked in a trench before dawn. The Germans were stopped for some seconds by barbed wire entanglements and lost heavily before they broke thru. In the hand-to-hand struggles that ensued Havildar shot a German officer, whose bullet grazed his head. He took the German sword and killed ten more men before he was brought down by a bullet in the foot.

"Otherwise," he said, "I should have killed more."

"Ganna Sing was the sole survivor of his party."

GREAT RECEPTION FOR NEW S.A. COMMISSIONER

Great interest is being taken in the public reception to be given to Commissioner Wm. J. Richards, successor to the late Commissioner Rees, as the leader of the Salvation Army in Canada. Mayor Hocken is to occupy the chair, and many of the city's citizens have promised to support him. The speakers include Hon. W. H. Hearst, president of the Ontario branch of the Salvation Army, and Hon. J. G. Gilmour, chief secretary of the Salvation Army.

The program will be chiefly of a musical nature, and will include the massed bands of the Salvation Army, a women's choir, composed of 200 voices, 100 juvenile singers, and the newly-organized Canadian staff songsters. The songs will be sung to national and patriotic airs, even "Tipperary" not being overlooked.

Ten Thousand Dollar Breach of Promise Case Goes by Default.

OSGOODE HALL NEWS

Judge Thinks It Unkind to Allow Litigant to Appeal.

Meyers Jacobs at Osgoode Hall yesterday, before Mr. Justice Middleton, moved for leave to appeal from Judge Winchester's decision, approving the award of arbitrators for property belonging to him, but expropriated by the board of education for the Lansdowne School extension.

The property was situated at 25 Robert street. Jacobs was awarded $4500 for it, or $100 less than that offered by the board. Jacobs asked $4500. His lordship reserved judgment, but stated that in his opinion it would be "a cruel kindness" to allow the appeal.

Judgment by default was granted against Louis S. Helperin by Mr. Justice Middleton. Helperin is a commercial traveler of Hamilton and was sued by Miss Gertrude Jacobs, a Toronto girl, for $10,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage. The damages will be fixed at the jury sitting.

BOMB FACTORY FOUND BY NEW YORK POLICE

Place Where Missiles Have Been Manufactured Revealed by Explosion in Tenement House.

Special to The Toronto World.
NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Chance may have placed in the hands of the police information which the most careful search had failed to reveal. As the result of an explosion which took place in a dingy six-story tenement house at No. 133 Cherry street last night, it seems likely that a bomb factory has been brought to light, where missiles which have imperilled the lives of many people may have been made. Not only are the police hopeful of finding the materials from which these bombs were made, but the men who manufactured and planted them, as well.

BOMB FACTORY FOUND BY NEW YORK POLICE

Place Where Missiles Have Been Manufactured Revealed by Explosion in Tenement House.

Special to The Toronto World.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Chance may have placed in the hands of the police information which the most careful search had failed to reveal. As the result of an explosion which took place in a dingy six-story tenement house at No. 133 Cherry street last night, it seems likely that a bomb factory has been brought to light, where missiles which have imperilled the lives of many people may have been made. Not only are the police hopeful of finding the materials from which these bombs were made, but the men who manufactured and planted them, as well.
