Immaculate Conception Doctrine, Greatest Aberration In History,

Declares Rev. Canon L. N. Tucker

In the course of his sermon at St. Paul's Cathedral yesterday morning, Rev. Canon L. N. Tucker took occasion to deal with the doctrine of the immaculate conception as enunciated by Pope Pius IX in 1854, declaring it to be the "greatest aberration in the history of Christendom." He stated that the list glimpse afforded of her by the Bible shows her with the disciples in prayer before the opening up of the great apostolic effort to take the gospel the "greatest aberration in the history of Christendom." He stated that the list glimpse afforded of her by the Bible shows her with the disciples in prayer before the opening up of the Bible shows her with the disciples in prayer before the opening up of the the "greatest aberration in the history of Christendom." He stated that the list glimpse afforded of her by that the Bible declared that all have simped to the whole world. The preacher pointed out further that the Bible declared that all have simped and come short of the glory of God, no exception being made at all. In recent very words of the Virgin Mary herself, who, in the magnificat, declared: "My sould doth magnify the Lord and my solid dother magnificat, declared: "My solid dother magn

"I'll admit it after my learned friend, Mr. McKillop, takes a nip of it and says it is," replied Mr. Meredith.
"I might not be able to go on with the case, so I'll decline," stated the crown attorney.

The Fatal Clink.
Mr. Childs told how he saw Gray and a colored man, whom he positively identified as Charles Bell, come along by the diner last Wednesday manking. Charles Bell, come along by last Wednesday morning. He clink of bottles, and then Gray nd Bell tried to pass him. He grabbed Gray but Bell ran, said witness. Two other employees, Alfred Osborne and Reuben Beadle, testified to seeing Gray in the clutches of Mr. Childs, and stated that they had gone after A. Brooks, assistant master car builder, who in turn had phoned for License Inspector Keenlevside spector Keenleyside.

He "Met a Man."

Gray swore that Bell was not the man who had been with him in the operation. He had met a man Tuesday night, "kinda half," not white nor yet black, who told him he had a little job for him the following morning carrying a bag of bottles. He had said that he would treat him right. If he had known that the bottles had contained whiskey he would never have taken the job.

Mr. Graydon stated he did not think the prisoner's story was reasonable, and the prisoner's story was reasonable, and would not accept it. The fine followed as a natural course Judgment Reserved.
