years later, William sailed before the mast for a number of years with another brother. Capt. Chas. F.

When 31 years of age he married Miss Classe a Wridge, daughter of Shabah Elloridge of Sandy Cove. A few years later he went to Boston and shipped out of that port in the African trade, who re he was engaged until his death.

Having made los g voyages, he would be absent two, or three years at a time. He bought a farm, built a nice house, and had everything comfortable about the home. A good wife one daughter, Pearl, aged 10, and two sons, Jeffrey, aged 8, and Seyma ur, aged 5 years.

him while ashore.
Your correspondent visited the home of Mr. Saunders and had a short interview with his widow, who although mourning the loss of a kind husband was willing to talk of the sad circumstances surrounding the murder.

When asked how she first learned of her husband's death, she said that ter brother had seen an account of it in one of the daily papers. Did you receive any news from the owners of the vessel? No; the first news I received from Boston was a despatch from Mr. Bou-lreau, where my husband boarded in

No: when writing he very seldom mentioned the captain's mame or any of the crew. I see by the papers the captain had a very hard name and that they thought at first he wouldn't go with him; but in his letter to me he did not speak of captain or crew. Did you receive any letter after the vessel sailed?

What do you think was the cause of the murder?

I really could not say. It must have been on account of the captain ill-using the crew, and when the attempted to kill him, my husband has tried to save the captain's life and lost his own. My husband was a very able man and had he been aware of able man, and had he been aware of what was going to happen he would have been alive today. He must have been shot before he had a chance to save his life.

Nothing except what has been in the papers. Oh, yes, I received a let-ter from Mr. Boudreus in Boston.

which the happy couple were made one.

The bride, who is a daughter of Isaac Kaplan of 124 Main street, was becomingly attired in a magnificent bridal gown, and was attended by Miss Ethel Kaplan, her sister; Miss Annie Hoffman, a coustn of the groom; Miss Tilley Goldman, and Miss Fannie Tompkins, a daughter of the officiating rabbi. The groom was supported by Herman Kaplan and Able Kaplan, brothers of the bride; Arthur Arkins and Joseph Finebrook.

Rabbi Tompkins took his position underneath the canopy, which was supported by the four groomsmen, each holding a lighted candle, shortly affter 7 o'clock. The groom also took his stand underneath the canopy and in a few minutes the bridal couple appeared, consisting of the bride, her bridesmalds and the parents of the contracting parties. They circled seven times around the groom, after which the young couple received their parents' blessing.

The groom's father spoke to his son a few words of advice, after which the groom placed on the index finger of the bride's right hand the wedding ring.

Rabbi Tompkin read in Hebrew the conclusion of which he handed to the groom a glass of wine, which was in turn passed to the bride, who, after touching it to her lips, passed it back to her husband, who dropped the glass to the floor, breaking it. The meaning of this is that in the midst of their festivities and rejoicing they should remember the destruction of the temple in Jedusolom.

At the conclusion of the extemony a sumptuous supper was served, after which dancing was indulged in until a late hour. Duplissaes orchestra furnished the music.
