Just how he came there is omewhat of a mystery. For several cient hotel accommodation. days there have been rumors of a man being nearly killed near Sackville, but the facts are very difficult to obtain. Officers of the penitentiary, who discovered the guard, are naturally very reticent. So far as can be learned the facts are about as follows: Last Thursday the guard, in company with Blanche Dooley, a woman out of the penitentiary on ticket-ofleave, now living at Westcock, and a man who lives a little beyond West cock, procured some liquor and started in to have a big time. They went driving, so the story goes, but what happened is difficult to say. They drove to Dorchester and afterwards started for Sackville. Some time af-terwards some officers of the penitentiary, who were driving towards Sackville, discovered McDougall by the side of the road, unconscious. His face had been badly smashed. Near at hand was a wagon, from which the horse had been extracted. Blanche Dooley holding the lines over the horse, was dealing blows to the animal, which was executing a series of
