

AL BAKING POWDER

RE DELICIOUS AND WHOLESOME

worn this accident has not been an unfrequent occurrence in hallways; and last winter a commotion was caused in the hallway of an opera house simply by the breaking of one of these silken cords.

As a precaution and to keep them from swinging many women when dancing fasten their pearls to the front of their bodices with a brooch; or if the string is long enough they wind them about their wrists. It is a most reckless habit to twirl them nervously about the fingers and to make a plaything of them; for it must necessarily hasten the fraying of the cord. The cost of having a string of pearls fifty pearls restrung at a reliable house is about seventy-five cents or one dollar, and surely considering the comfort it brings the money is well expended.

A. Naval Solomon.

Captain McB., a credit to his race says London Sports Moments, was once in command of a troop-ship returning from India. On board he had as passengers three ladies, all wives of officers in her majesty's service.

Now it fell out that the cabin allotted to them was fitted up to accommodate four, and consequently it contained four wash-basins, one of which was far larger than the other three.

For the right to use this particular basin each lady put forth her claim, citing her husband's position in the army. But the husbands, unfortunately, all proved to be of equal rank, so to settle the matter the trio bearded the captain in his cabin.

'We will leave it entirely to you, captain,' they said, and abide by your decision.'

Captain McB. cogitated, and then declared solemnly, with the faintest twinkle in his grey eyes:

'Ladies, as it is no matter of rank, I think it would be right that the oldest among ye should have the largest bowl.'

With murmured thanks the ladies filed out again, but that basin was never used during the voyage.

Tactful.

A little tact sometimes saves a great deal of pain, and every man whose duty it is to select or dismiss employees will find it as essential to his comfort as to that of the men with whom he deals. The New York Sun tells the story of a case which called for extraordinary tact and received it.

The conductor was trying the voice of a young woman who wished to secure a place in an opera troupe. The manager was standing by. The candidate was frail and timid. She finished her song with an air of distress.

'How is it?' asked the manager, unceremoniously.

The conductor caught the pleading eyes of the girl. But he had his duty to perform. He struck three notes on the piano and left the rest to the manager.

The three notes were B A D.

A lady's maid, visiting with the mistress at the residence of a celebrated surgeon, then deceased, noticed the classic invitation, 'Salve,' upon the hall floor, and in the drawing room a picture of Cleopatra applying the asp to her beautiful bosom. Whereupon, with that quick, but not always correct, woman's intuition about which we hear so much nowadays, she confidently, but in all innocence, inquired later—

'Dr.—was a physician, was he not? I felt quite positive' he was when I first saw 'Salve' on the hall floor, and then that poor thing in the drawing room with the asp in her hand, I knew he must have been a doctor.'

Keep it in mind.

A French medical paper recommends, as the best cure for nervousness, remaining in bed a few weeks. It reports cases of what seemed incipient insanity cured by this simple method. It recommends a partial return to the custom prevalent in the time of Louis XIV., when the bed was used not only for sleeping, but as a pleasant place to remain while reading, eating, receiving friends, etc.

Visitor to the various suburban resorts the last summer or two noted that the halcyon girl had reached this province and though for the time being she may have been a thing of beauty she was not according to some ideas a joy forever. One well known society lady in discussing the matter the other day said:

'The vogue of the halcyon girl did not last long. Every I flounce was against her. She was a picturesque sight, but beyond that there was little in her favor. Complexions suffered and coarsened as they never had before. Probably last winter's diamonds for low-neck dresses had more than anything else to do with the revulsion against this fashion. The charms of beauty and athletics are scarcely sufficient to reconcile a girl to the differences in that that the summer has brought, when no intervening hat has been worn since the summer weeks that have passed. Her hair, with her hair firing in the wind, was an attractive sight, but the winter weeks were too strong to compensate for that brief moment of charm. Damages in tint were not confined wholly to the complexion. Faded hair was nearly as common a year ago as tanned noses, and it went over as a heritage from vacation into the winter, and was the source of dismay to many a girl who never realized how much a summer without a hat could do toward burning strange and unsuitable colors into her hair. There were girls without hats to be seen during the summer just closed, but they were few in number and generally of the kind that take up a task on during the second year and not during the first. Nobody will regret, for the sake of its beauty, that this change in the style has come. As a permanent summer mode, it would have been more destructive of its beauty than any other. The evils of golf and bicycle riding, which were at one time discussed vigorously, came only from the habit of going bareheaded. Everything in the two sports tended to improve a woman's looks, except the tan from sun and wind. The effect of both of these was much worse when she was bareheaded, and keeping her head covered will do more to make athletics beautiful than anything else.'
