vantages which accrue to a city possessing a properly accredited trade commissioner—advantages which other of circulars among possible and prospective customers is necessary. The personal canvass by a representative is the commercial method and brings results.

Progressive cities with sites to dispose of, and facilities to other to new industries, have come to recognize that something more than a glowing panegyric sent broadcast through the mails is necessary to bring hard headed mannfacturers in the old country and elsewhere to talk business. The trade commissioner, with facts, figures and arguments at his finger ends, who get out and hustles for his city and lands a new industry once or twice a year, is the latest and most successful development in civic thair manship of Mr. H. P. Robinson, has done much to make St. John more widely known. The opportunity presents itself for them to crystalize what at first may have been only a suggestion into a definite policy. The appointment of a trade commissioner for St. John would involve an expenditure of possibly $3.500 a year, and, as a new departure, the exercise of a certain amount of faith on the part of the citizens, but its success, judging by the experience of other cities, would never be indoubt.

EXPLOITS OF A BUCCANEER.

The Toronto News, replying editorially to a letter from "A Disgusted Reader," respecting an article on Mr. Pugsley's career which appeared in the News on the day the minister arrived in Toronto, says:—"The writer deems it improper to attack a Cabinet Minister who "is endeavoring to ascertain the needs of Toronto Har-"bor. The assertion is made that the News is to "coveraged by the experience of the properties of the properties of the world's trade.

"On the part of the part of the part of the competitive witch, lift true, would stamp him as a criminal not it to be at large."

After again referring to Mr. Pugsley's connection with the McAvity dredging scandal, and his overdrawn with the McAvity frame enhances the charms of the picture which it embraces and protects.

In addition to its aesthetic value, which is of the greatest importance, the garden has other uses in a city where fresh flowers and vegetables are not always easy to secure. The home garden provides such flowers as are required to embellish the dining table, and the different rooms in the house. Plato said "The ornaments of a house are friends that frequent it." Next' to the friends, perhaps, are the flowers. Certainly a bouquet of variegated flowers, filling the air with their mingling perfumes, and delighting the eye with a right of color, is an ornament.

A MORAL REVOLUTION.

The Ottawa Citizen is apparently worried over a covery that crime is increasing in the United States nd Canada. But possibly what it considers a recrus scence of crime is really an enlargement of the moral rceptions of the people. One of the most striking, as well as one of the most encouraging features of the ime is the tendency to place many actions formerly egarded with tolerance in the category of crimes.

A moral revolution, fraught with momentous con-sequences, is undoubtedly in progress in both Canada and the United States, though, perhaps, owing to the flexible character of our institutions, and the readiness with which we adapt our views and habits to changing conditions we do not fully realize the significance of what is solve on accord we conditions we do not fully realize the significance of what is going on around us.

The evolution of industry, of commerce, of culture, is changing many of our conceptions of life, as well as the conditions of life. In all departments of life, industrial, social and religious we are breaking with old traditions, old ideals; or at least seeking to reinterpret them in accordance with our enlarging knowledge of the changing phenomena of life. the changing phenomena of life.

A few years ago practical exponents of Darwinism. like Rockefeller, were held up as examples to the youth of the land, but today, many people are inclined to consider them rather undesirable types of the survival of the slickest, and the methods by which they survived rather questionable, to say the least. And many other old idols have fallen from their pedestal.

A TRADE COMMISSIONER FOR ST. JOHN.

The dearth of new industries has been a frequent subject for discussion by such bodies as the Board of Trade of this city for many years. Annually a new industries committee has been apointed, meeting occassionally, distributing a certain amount of literature, engaging in some corespondence and dissolving automatically at the end of the year, to be succeeded by another committee of well-intentioned citizens, who have solemnly pursued a similar programme.

But as a result of their efforts new industries do not materialize. If this statement is thought to be inacture to the part of the citizens. They are here, or will be here, because they discovered that St. John suited them.

The advertizing committee of the Board of Trade—a new departure this year, which since its organization has been prosecuting an active publicity ampaign—at a recent meeting discussed the question of the city appointing a special representative whose duty it would be to press the claims of St. John for recognition on manufacturers and others who might desire to extend their business.

With this suggestion as a nucleus, St. John may at

GOOD STORIES

Slang is tabooed in the home of a West Side family, principally because there is a bright little girl who displays a persistent aptitude in retaining expressive but uncultured phrases. The other evening at thinner the mother, father and daughter drifted into the vernacular and a fresh start was necessary. The little girl started it. "I'm not stuck on this bread," she said.
"Dorothy," said her mother, "you want to cut that slang out."
"That's a peach of a way of correcting the child," commented the father. "I know," replied the mother, "but I just wanted to put her wise."

Johnnie do you understand what is meant by a crisis? Yes, mum. Tell us, Johnnie. Two out an' the bases full, mum."

Mama—No, you can't have any more ennies today.

The Spoilt Child—If you don't give to one I'll wake the baby.

Hank Stubbs—The ministers are lamin' automobiles cuz folks don't ome to church. Bige Miller—Pshaw! Autymobiles on't preach, do they?
