A Broken Wedding Ring By Bertha M. Clay

His face paled with anger. "You speak bravely enough now that you know your words give me no concern. I am justly punished for in my blindness I comforted that I loved you best. You must forgive me, Hettie. I shall love but one daughter now."

"I have nothing to forgive; it was natural that you should love Leah best. Do not be angry with her. She told me she did not care about the life you wanted her to lead. Leah loves everything beautiful, and she wants to be loved. She does not care for lectures and—lies!"

The simple words a most marked the general smile; but there was a smile on the lips of Martin Ray, as he turned to his elder child.

"Look at me," he said, "and tell me to my face that you are going to leave me."

"It is the life I leave, not you," she replied.

"Listen to me, Leah. If you leave me now, you shall never see me again! You shall go from my face, my heart, my life, never to re-enter them. You shall cease even to be known by my name; and your sister shall never see or speak to you again. Do you understand all that you are giving up?"

"I can hear my coming life better than the other, father. I could never follow the career that you have traced for me. It is better that I should go."

"Oh, Leah, you must not leave him! You cannot desert me! I shall die if you go from me and leave me here alone!"

"Come with me, Hettie; if it is no life for me, it is none for you. Come with me."

"No; I will never leave my father unless I die!" sobbed the girl.

"How can you not so, Leah? Your own father!"

"You forget," interrupted Leah, "that it is mother who sent has for me."

"Her heart is hardened!" cried Martin Ray. "Say no more to her, Hettie. She can leave us both without her. She is a thankless child, and you are a loving one. Come to my heart, Hettie; your home shall be there."

But as her golden head lay upon his breast, amid her sobs and tears, she heard the name of Leah as often as she heard her own.

"There is no need to prolong this painful scene," said General Hatton, after a short silence. "My dear Leah, for the trust and confidences you have shown me I thank you. You shall see that it is well placed. I take you from what I believe to be most unworthy hands, and adopt you as my own daughter. I would take your sister, but she declines to come. If in the future she should change her mind, I shall none the less be till her friend."

"I thank you," said a gentle voice, full of tears; "but I shall never leave my father. It does not matter who he is, or what any one thinks of him; he is my father, and I will be faithful to him."

"I say nothing but this," replied the general; "if ever you want a friend come to me."

"She will never want one while I live!" cried Martin Ray. "Oh, Leah, child of my heart, how little did I dream that you would become one of those against whom I have preached and taught my life long! That I should have a daughter
