Red Raiders rebuilding

By BOB MARSHALL

Don Nelson, coach of the UNB Red Raiders, decided before he started recruiting for 1972-73 that he would go with the rookies in order to build a championship club in the future. After two scrimmages against NBIT and STU Nelson's foresight seems to have paid off.

Knowing that he has a green and inexperienced team, Nelson has found a positive element in the play of his rookies. With the future looking bright Nelson still has hopes for a good season in 72-73. These rookies are pushing the veterans in vying for starting positions and will provide depth on the bench.

The two most promising rookies are Ken Amos, a 6'1" wing man from Fredericton High School and Dave Seman a 6'5" post man from St. Stephen High School. Amos, who is fighting for a starting spot, has been shooting well and plays excellent defense. He comes to the college game having to make little adjustment as he played man to man defense in high school under Rick Cotter. This is a tribute to Cotter and to Amos himself, as often the switch is very difficult.

Dave Seman seems to have locked himself up a starting position on the club. His ball handling and man to man defense will have to improve, however, Dave has all the physical qualities to be a top pivot.

Other promising rookies include Blaine MacDonald, John Robbins, Scott Fowler and Gallagher. MacDonald from Tawa is a real surprise to Nelson as he shows signs of getting better every time out. His strengths are rebounding and driving lay-ups. Once he develops an outside shot he becomes a triple-threat and he too will be pressing for starting point.

John Robbins, a guard from Belfast, Maine, has been coming on after a slow start. Robbins is a good shooter who has shown leadership ability. If he keeps improving Robbins will give the Slipp help at guard when Seman has foul problems.

Scott Fowler from Hartsville, Trimble has been the most promising about rookies in the camp. Fowler came in at the center position but Nelson tried him at wing. When he didn't work out as well he went back to the post. Fowler has shown well at the post and is a bright spot in Nelson's future plans.

With this fine crop of rookies Nelson can now recruit to fill the missing links for his future championship clubs. This year must depend upon the quick development of his rookies for a successful season.
