ifter mounting to agreat beigth, fell donvn again in fars White Ifland, whicb was quite illuminated zvith them. Till Ganuary 1708, the volcano continued its erupticus feveral Cimrse a diy. February 10. the fire, the fmoke, the fubter rancous nei/is, the boiling of the fea, and the subirling of bot fones becane ftill more dreadful thane ever, and increajed by the 15 th of April ls juch a degree, that it was imagined the newv ifland muft bave been quite blown up. But after that, the claps of tbunder became lefs tervible, the waters mare calm, and the fornch was farce perceived: though the finoke fill grew thicker, the ßeover of afhes fill increafed towards the jouth.

On the 15 th of Fuly fome ecclesafics ventured near a fart of the ifland wowhere ibere was no fire or finoke, with an intention of landing, But when they came ruithin 200 paces, they objerved the weater greav botter as they adrvanced. I'bey founded, but could find no boitom, though their line was 95 fatbom. While they were deliberating evbat they foall do, they difcovered that the caulking of their bar'k melied, upon rubicb they immediately hafiened away to Saistorin. Thbey weve no fooner returned, than the large mouth or the volcano began its ufual cruprions, and threw out a quantity of large fiery fones, whickitell on the place tbey bad jufi left. Mea. furing this new iland, whicb they did from the larger Cameni, they found it 200 feet high, 100 broad, and 5000 round.

In 1710 it burnt again, and torrents of fire and fmoke ifiued out from it, and the feas boiled up all round.-In 1712 the ifland was near tbree leagues round. But neither any motion nor increafe was ¿bferwed.. Thefury of the larger moutb was jo mucl, abatea, that no fubterranous noifes were beard; there only iffued fome jmoke fill, and a liquid matter, fometimes red, but mof frequently green, rubich inged the fea for more than a league.-Pliny afures us, that the iflated of Santorin itfeli rofe out of the fea, and many otber ifes in the Arclinpeiago art faid to have been produced in the Jame manver."

T
HE gameffer's delight; and the wame of a game, W'th three eights of gamefter's my birth-place's name.
7. M.

Answre WINCHESTER.

